Another airplane record. Howard Hughes, flying 18,000 feet up much of the way, came from Los Angeles to Newark in 9 hours, 27 minutes, 10 seconds. High up, where air resistance is less, using a super-charging engine and helping his own lungs with oxygen from a tank, Mr. Hughes beat the existing record, held by Colonel Roscoe Turner, of 10 hours, 2 minutes, 51 seconds.

Mr. Hughes proves that being rich does not always spoil young Americans. He flew from ocean to ocean without a stop, 2450 miles, at an average speed of 260 miles.

Germany's government worries about Russia, and what may happen in a year or two when Russia's present industrial plans are completed. At the start of his dictator career Chancellor Hitler denounced Russia and all her works. Hitler and Stalin do not love each other. Russia has been building what may be Europe's biggest air fleet, plus a powerful submarine fleet and a gigantic army.

War between Russia and Germany might smooth out other European difficulties, removing French anxiety about Hitler's plans. Napoleon, and the allies after him, discovered that conquering Russia is a problem not easily solved. If Hitler once became involved in that direction, he might find an outlet for all his unused energy.

Stalin might find himself busy on two fronts in case Japan, seeing Hitler start, should try to eliminate the objectionable Vladivostok air and submarine bases, now aimed at Japan's coast, shipping and factories.

Under the circumstances it is pleasing to read that Hiram Johnson, of California, and some others, have decided to oppose Secretary Hull's plan for a government of the United States shared by Great Britain and other countries.

Senator Johnson and some of his associates feel that this country showed weak knees and a yellow streak when it allowed England to regulate our commerce in the big war. Hiram Johnson favors absolute and complete freedom of the seas for this country and complete neutrality. Welcome news.

Big broadcasting companies refuse to allow the Republican party to broadcast "laughable skits" on the "New Deal."

Now, or after some worthwhile upheaval, "freedom of the air" will have to be dealt with as was "freedom of the press" when the Constitution was written.

For radio companies to say to the party in power, "Because we fear you we shall take you to every home in the country and let you say what you please, and shall refuse to give the same publicity to your opponents," might not suit the American idea.

There is rioting in Puerto Rico, numbers killed and wounded in various places. It is said a Puerto Rico Young Men's Party" has decided to separate Puerto Rico from the United States, inspired perhaps by the departure of the Philippines.

It is supposed that this government will tell the "young Puerto Rico gentlemen" that they will not be allowed to separate and might as well forget about it.

This country, in the way of protection, resources, education and civilization, is necessary to Puerto Rico, and, strategically, Puerto Rico is useful to the United States.

What would England say if Jamaica should announce, "We wish to leave the British Empire?"

The Philippines, now free to rule themselves until Japan or somebody decides to take them over, announce that their police force is being formed into an army. It will take a great deal of patriotism and military genius to oppose the Japanese military machine, airplanes included, with an army like that.

Paris reports negotiations for an English loan to France of four billion francs, $264,800,000.

The British may want to strengthen Premier Laval, with whom they deal more comfortably than with the excitable Frenchman, while the spontaneous word for England is still "perfidious."

France presumably would pay England; what European nations do when they borrow from Uncle Sam does not apply when they borrow from each other.

Senator Norris, from Nebraska, a blunt person, who says what he thinks, pleasing or otherwise, tells farm leaders that no law regulating agricultural production will pass the Supreme Court. The decision on AAA settles that in Senator Norris' opinion.

Youngest to Die in Sky Liner Tragedy

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Youngest victim of the 17 who died in the crash of an American Airlines transcontinental plane at Goodwin, Ark., was this Wakefield boy, Seba Horovitz, 5, the son of Attorney Samuel Horovitz of Boston and Wakefield. The child's mother and grandmother also lost their lives. The picture is one which was taken recently at Atty. Horovitz' Ashburton place office.

BRUNO SIGNS APPEAL, WIFE PLANS PLEA

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 15—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, already a two-time lorer in federal courts, today signed a new application in a federal proceeding to escape execution Friday night for the Lindbergh baby murder.

His attorneys, visiting him in the death house at noon today, obtained his signature to a paper the exact nature of which they did not disclose.

It was understood, however, to be needed in an application to the United States Supreme Court or a member thereof for a writ of habeas corpus.

VISITS HUSBAND

Mrs. Anna Hauptmann also visited her husband today—her next to last chance to see the former German machine gunner.

Col. Marie Q. Kimberling, prison warden, said tomorrow would be the last day she would be permitted to visit the death cell, unless Hauptmann's execution should be delayed by court action or by reprieve.

They asked her if she intended to ask Governor Harold G. Hoffman for clemency.

SCOLPONETTI APPOINTED TO FIN. COM.

BULLETIN

Lester F. Murphy, Finance Commission investigator, testified at the commission's snow removal hearing today an analysis of the city's own figures shows it is paying $123,000 more than necessary for new trucks.

Governor Curley today appointed Joseph A. Scolponetti of Brighton to the Boston Finance Commission, and Alexander Brin of Brookline, publisher of the Jewish Advocate, to the advisory board of the department of education.

Both appointments are subject to confirmation by the Executive Council.

Scolponetti, a Boston College graduate, is at present assisting the state bank commissioner on the liquidation of closed trust companies.

As the finance commission post carries no salary, Governor Curley said Scholponetti could legally hold both positions. Only the chairman of the finance commission receives a salary.

SUCCEEDS WHEELER

Scolponetti succeeds Alexander Wheeler, who resigned Monday. Wheeler was the last survivor of ex-Governor Ely's appointees on the commission.

During Governor Curley's last term as mayor of Boston, Scolponetti was an assistant corporation counsel, and he was an assistant district attorney for a time under William J. Foley.

Brin was named to the education board to succeed Lincoln Filene, who, with two other members, resigned in protest over the Governor's failure to reappoint Payson Smith as commissioner of education.

NO KENNEY ACTION

Governor Curley said he would not do anything at today's session of the executive council regarding Raymond J. Kenney, director of fish and game, whose term has expired, nor about the board of parole, which the council has been investigating.

Smith Talk Awaited by Democrats

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Washington, D. C., Jan. 15—Former Governor Alfred E. Smith's forthcoming speech at the American Liberty League dinner here, January 25, is looked forward to eagerly and also anxiously.

Those leaders of the so-called Jeffersonian Democracy who are near the former New York governor believe and state that the speech is going to be pretty violent and is going to tear the hide off the administration.

Whether the administration refers to Roosevelt personally, or to the Tugwells and the Wallaces and various Communistic elements with which the President has surrounded himself, does not seem to be definitely known.

However, a vivid display of political fireworks is expected by all—and much dreaded by some of the more conservative leaders of the Jeffersonian Democracy.

The leaders recall the assault by former Governor Smith upon the queer alphabetical agencies of "baloney dollar" fiscal policies of the

JAPANESE QUIT NAVAL PARLEY

London, Jan. 15 (AP)—A flat refusal to discuss Japanese demands for equality in naval strength was read to the international naval conference today by Norman Davis, chief American delegate.

Britain, France and Italy agreed with the American stand.

The four other powers—Great Britain, the United States, Italy and France—expect to meet tomorrow to agree upon opening a new four-power parley without the Japanese.

Davis told the conference the United States government was convinced the Japanese "principle of a common upper limit would not serve as a basis for negotiation and agreement" and could not accept it.

PILOT AVERTS FIRE; ALL BODIES FOUND

Goodwin, Ark., Jan. 15 (INS)—Engine failure due to a clogged gas line today was believed to have sent the American Airlines transcontinental luxury liner, the Southerner, crashing into the Arkansas swamps, where all 17 persons aboard died.

Department of Commerce officials, here to investigate the worst tragedy in American commercial air history, heard two farmers, who saw the brightly-lighted ship swooping into the cypress bogs, declare the ship's engines were faltering.

The engines were sputtering and choking just before the ship went into its death glide, the eye witness stated.

In halting swamp country dialect, their eyes bleary and bloodshot, their clothing caked with mud from a night of slopping through muck and water to help bring out the cruelly mangled bodies of the 17 victims, they told their dramatic, death-laden stories.

Glenn Williamson, a farmer who lives two miles from the cypress bog into which the ship plummeted to demolition, said:

"I heard the ship going over my house. I looked out and saw it right overhead. It was mighty low. All the lights were burning. The engines were a-coughing.

3 Wakefield Folk Killed

While Attorney Samuel B. Horovitz of Boston and Wakefield waited in Los Angeles with a movie camera to film their arrival, his mother, wife and only child perished in a plane crash in an Arkansas swamp.

His father had died three years ago 45 miles from the spot where the big transcontinental plane went down, carrying 17 persons to their deaths.

Illness—Japanese influenza, contracted in the Orient—had held Horovitz in California. He wanted to see his family. He wanted them to see the West.

His son was approaching his fifth birthday. And as he wrote, suggesting the air trip.

BONUS PASSAGE DUE FRIDAY

Washington, Jan. 15 (INS)—The 16-year-old controversy over payment of a federal cash bonus to 3,518,191 American veterans of the World War today appeared headed to a final conclusion with Congress enacting the "baby bonus" compromise bill even over a presidential veto.

A Senate vote by Friday is probable.

An International News Service poll of the Senate, which heretofore has blocked cash payment of the bonus, indicated 64 senators would vote to override a Roosevelt veto.

This would be just the number required if all other senators in the 96 membership voted to sustain a presidential objection.

President Roosevelt will veto the "Baby Bond" bonus bill, it was predicted today in White House circles.

Probably the measure will be passed over his veto, it was conceded, but Mr. Roosevelt was described as determined to veto it because of his record on the bonus.

ILLNESS FATAL TO BIRMINGHAM

He was a member of the legislature for 10 years and Democratic floor leader for the greater part of that time.

He was born in Boston, April 14, 1893, and was graduated from Boston College High School and Boston College.

He was a funeral director, active in veterans organizations and a past commander of the Brighton-Allston Post, A. L.

Representative Birmingham is survived by his wife, the former Kathleen Keller, a four-year-old daughter, Kathleen; two sisters, Florence and Eileen; two brothers, William and Raymond, and his father, Michael J. Birmingham.

A past district deputy of the Brighton Council, K. of C., the legislator also was active in St. Columbkille's Court, M. C. O. F. His sister, Miss Florence Birmingham, is president of the Massachusetts Women's Political Club.

Funeral services will be held Friday morning with a solemn high requiem mass at Our Lady of Presentation Church, Brighton.

"I saw the lights starting down in a long glide and I knew she was in for it.

"She disappeared behind the trees. Ie heard a crash like thunder. Then another. Then all was quiet."

Glenn Dover, another farmer living near the scene of the crash also said the ship's engines were not functioning normally.

"The engines were flasing," he said. "You could hear them cough, hesitate and then stutter into life again."

"All the time the ship was getting lower. There were so many lights shining I thought it was on fire."

MOTOR FALTERED

To these accounts of stuttering, failing engine investigators added the statement of John T. Shea, Memphis attorney, who flew in the doomed California-bound ship from Nashville to Memphis. One engine seemed faulty when the plane left Memphis, he said.

"The motor was not exactly missing, but wasn't running with the same smooth roar I had heard coming from Nashville," Shea said.

Lake Littlejohn, Department of Commerce air official from Little Rock, revealed that Pilot Gerald Marshall of Fort Worth, who had 9400 flying hours to his credit and was considered one of the nation's most experienced commercial flyers, knew he would have to make a forced landin gand took what precautions he could.

PILOT AVERTED FIRE

Littlejohn waded into the swamp three miles north of here where the crushed fuselage of the huge liner lay buried in water and muck and found that the ignition switches had been turned off to prevent fire or explosion when the ship hit.

"Pilot Marshal had cut the switches of his engines to avoid fire or explosion," Littlejohn said. "He knew he had to come rown."

Littlejohn said the exact cause of the crash may not be determined for some time—possibly never—because the plane was so badly smashed.

Mystery hovered over the shattered wreckage like a shroud. Why was no wred heard from the ship after it radioed "All OK" at 7:18 p. m until it crashed at 7:30?

Bodies of 17 Victims Dragged Out of Swamp

(Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press)

Goodwin, Ark., Jan. 15—Remnants of 17 bodies — victims of America's most disastrous airplane catastrophe—were recovered today from Arkansas marsh country where they crashed to death last night in "The Southern," luxurious American Airlines transcontinental ship.

There were no survivors.

Coronor J. C. Crawford held that the 14 passengers and crew of three—12 men, four women and a child—died "by accidental airplane crash."

The last of the bodies was brought out of the swampland at 8:45 a. m. (Central Standard time) in flatbed wagons drawn by mules struggling in deep mud.

All were removed to a Memphis funeral home where it was hoped definite identifications could be made.

Rescue workers, who found bodies strewn over an area 400 yards long and about 75 yards wide in a water-filled bog, left the wreckage as it was for a study by Jack Janse, Fort Worth division airline inspector for the department of commerce.

TWO WOMEN'S BODIES

The first hearse going to Memphis carried the bodies of two women, one elderly, the other much younger.

"We think they must be the bodies of Mrs. Samuel Horovitz of Wakefield, Mass., and her mother-in-law," said Frank Thompson, undertaker. "However, the bodies are mangled almost beyond recognition.

"Other hearses are en route now with other bodies. It is going to be difficult to identify any of them.

"Relatives of Frank C. Hart of New York City have chartered a plane and expect to arrive in Memphis tonight to take his body back with them as soon as it can be identified."

Relatives of other victims were en route to Memphis from all parts of the country.

CORONER VIEWS DEAD

Crawford, aged and crippled coroner of St. Francis County, was carried tiously on a stretcher through the swamps to the scene before dawn to hold an inquest.

He was hoid aloft by four men, standing deep in water, as he examined the bodies, heard two farmers who said they saw the plane fall, and made notes in a small book by the light of lanterns.

On stretchers, the bodies which had been recovered were carried before him and, with the assistance of Cecil West of the Little Rock airport, who held a passenger list, he attempted identification.

Many of the entries in the coroner's book read:

"Man—unidentified."

"Woman—name unknown."

The first body to be identified was that of W. S. Hardwicke of Beardstown, Ill.

One shaky farm wagon, drawn by two mules, managed to get within 500 yards of the wreckage after bogging down many times. It was used to get the bodies out to the highway, a mile and a quarter away.

Postal officials from Little Rock gathered up what they could of the mail scattered through the woods and, after weighing it, said they thought all of it it had been recovered.

"We tried to get in with wagons, but they bogged down, so we went into the woods on foot," said M. E. Davis, one of the first to reach the scene.

"About three miles east of Goodwin, we began to find bits of the plane, a wheel, the ground, three pieces of metal, and we knew we were on the right trail.

"BODIES STREWN ROUND"

"We followed these clues and saw where the trees had been torn up and we picked up bits of plane for a distance of 300 yards before we came to the wreck itself. It was slow going, in boggy ground, much of it covered four or five five feet deep with swamp water.

"I say me reached the wreckage, but what it amounted to was finding the largest pieces of the plane with our flashlights. The wings were gone, torn to pieces; the motors were there in the mud, but buried in the ground.

"The plane and the bodies were scattered all over the place, most of the bodies being near the motors.

"It looked to me that the plane had come down and levelled off at the treetops, then got into the trees and kept right on going as long as it could through the trees.

"I understand there was a child on the ship. I found the child's shoes, near the motors, but not the body.

"There was baggage and mail scattered all over the place. The cabin of the plane was gone, just one side wall standing. Two bodies near the motors looked like they might have been the pilots."

'ALL WELL' SAID PLANE

The "Southerner" was headed for Little Rock with its 14 passengers, two pilots and stewardess in good weather and apparently was in good mechanical shape. Radio communication between the plane and its ground stations was maintained until four or five minutes before the estimated time of the crash. The last report was an "all well" sent from 3000 feet at 7:18.

The plane was literally torn to pieces, its luxurious cabin ripped apart, the wings sheared off as it smashed madly through the trees.

Many of the bodies that lay in the swamp were mangled beyond recognition.

When the plane was nearly an hour overdue at Little Rock, and no further wireless messages had been received, the company authorized searching parties to start out from both Memphis and Little Rock.

"NO DOCTORS NEEDED"

Subsequently the airlines dispatched five ambulances to Brinkley, near here, announcing the action as "a precautionary measure."

J. W. Fogg, farmer, one of the searchers, reported:

"They're all dead. You don't need a doctor. The plane—what's left of it—is buried in five feet of mud and water."

The first alarm was brought here when George Jones, a farmer living near the scene of the disaster, roused J. W. French, keeper of the general store, to tell him of the roar of the doomed ship close above his little cabin and then the crashing as the metal craft passed through the swampland woods.

French notified officers at nearby Forrest City and the search was on.

Fireman Freezes In Freight Car

Relatives of Harold Nordi, 40, who was found frozen to death in a freight car in Bangor, Me., were being sought here by local police. From papers found in his pockets, police identified him as a marine fireman.

Type of Giant Sky Liner in Tragedy; One of Victims, Wife

This is the type of giant sky liner—possibly the very plane—which crashed in a swamp at Goodwin, Ark., killing 17 persons, including two women and a child from Wakefield. The picture was taken at the time the huge ship, a 12-ton Douglas transport job, was turned over to American Airlines, Inc., the first of eight similar craft ordered by the same company. Design of the planes is for accommodation of 24 passengers by day, 16 at night, with special dressing rooms for men and women.

LIST OF VICTIMS IN PLANE CRASH

Death was no respecter of persons in the tragic crash of the American Airlines luxury plane in a Goodwin, Arkansas swamp.

Among the 17 persons who went to their deaths were a wealthy oil magnate, supposedly on his way to inspect vast coast properties, and a five-year-old Boston boy speeding to his father's side in Los Angeles, The boy's mother and grandmother died with him.

Herewith is a brief sketch of those whose identities and backgrounds have been established.

MRS. ISRAEL HOROVITZ, 62, Elm street, Wakefield. Mother of Attorney Samuel B. Horovitz, Harvard Law School graduate, on the staff of the Boston Legal Aid Society.

MRS. SAMUEL B. HOROVITZ, 36, 33 Elm street, Wakefield, wife of Attorney Horovitz and daughter of Abe Levy, Wolcott road, Brookline.

SEBA HOROVITZ, 5, son of Attorney and Mrs. Horovitz. Yesterday was his birthday. With his mother and grandmother he was going to California to meet his father, who is returning from a trip to the Orient.

W. R. DYESS, Little Rock, Arkansas, Federal Works Progress Administrator for Arkansas. He was returning to his home from a conference with Washington officials.

MRS. J. S. GREMILLION, Knoxville, Tenn. Wife of American Airlines station manager at Knoxville. Destination unknown.

CHARLES ALTSCHULL, 23, New York city and Stamford, Conn. Yale graduate and nephew of Governor Lehman's wife, returning to continue advanced courses in flying and engineering at Glendale, Cal., after a vacation trip.

JULIAN C. CAHN, 26, Los Angeles, Cal. Traveling salesman returning from a busines trip to New York. His father died last Friday while he was in New York. He flew home, attended the funeral and returned to New York to complete his business. University of California Law School graduate.

GERALD V. MARSHALL, 40, Fort Worth, Tex. Chief pilot, veteran of 9400 flying hours. Employed by the company since 1928.

GLENN FREEMAN, 32, Joplin, Mo., co-pilot. Former manager of a Joplin airport.

MISS PERLA GASPARINI, 23, Fort Worth, Tex., stewardess. Transferred to the coast run three months ago.

W. S. HARDWICKE, Beardstown, Ill.

A. D. CHERNUS, Beardstown, Illinois.

birthday in the air. It was also the day of his death.

For Horovitz's mother, Mrs. Bessie Horovitz, 61, the end came on a trip that she had frowned upon and that she had agreed to only under the persuasion of her daughter-in-law.

She expressed a premonition when she learned that the plane would pass over Arkansas, for it was in Hot Springs, that state, that her husband died three years ago.

TOLD BY BROTHER

The role that the Japanese influenza played in the plane horror was described by Horovits' brother, Julius, of Emerson street, Wakefield.

He lives only a short distance from the home of the attorney, in Elm street, that town, which has been closed up since the lawyer left three months ago on a trip to the Orient.

Julius explained that his brother was due back home last Sunday. But while in the Orient, he contracted influenza and was still in a weakened condition when he arrived in California.

His physician advised that he remain in that warm climate for three more weeks to insure him of his health.

So the lawyer, visualizing an ideal vacation trip for his family, suggested that they meet him at Los Angeles.

He, himself, on his departure from the East had flown to the coast, and had sought reservations for a trans-Pacific flight on the China Clipper, only to be informed the craft carried no passengers.

So, confident in air travel, he urged his wife, his mother and his son to travel West by plane to meet him.

He was all prepared, with a movie camera, to greet them on their arrival. In addition, he had planned a gay round of activities for them in California before they departed again for home.

At the home of Julius Horovitz, in Emerson street, Wakefield, he and his sister, Mrs. Jane Schreider, who lives next door, hopefully awaited word that there might be life aboard the plane, or that the trio had disembarked at Memphis for the night.

But no word came.

Julius put in a call to Goodwin, Arkansas, for details, but they were vague.

In his hand he held a telegram that he had received from Newark before the plane took off. It read:

Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Levy of Walcott road, Brookline, parents of Mrs. Horovitz, were near collapse today.

They received a telegram from Horovitz, stating that he would bring the bodies here for burial.

Mrs. Horovitz was formerly Miss Sara R. Levy of Chelsea. She was graduated from Chelsea High School in 1917. Her husband was also graduated from the same school.

She attended Massachusetts Normal Art School and Harvard Summer School and taught drawing in Chelsea public schools from 1921 to 1923.

Soviet's Army 1,300,000 Men

Moscow, Jan. 15 (AP)—Assistant Commissar of War Mikhail Tukhachevsky announced today the Soviet army has been raised to 1,300,000 men, making it the largest standing army in the world.

The disclosure was made in an address before the central executive committee of the Communist party.

SMITH LIBERTY LEAGUE TALK WAITED BY DEMOCRATS

The President was expected to be overwhelmed by Mr. Smith's denunciation at that time.

The former governor's speech, however, then was marked by bitterness, and the recoil was on the whole damaging to the ex-governor.

In fact, after that utterance Mr. Smith retired from politics for a matter of two years and is only now emerging from his political obscurity.

The leaders of the Jeffersonian Democracy believe that there is a real opportunity for this party, which they call the regular democracy of the nation, to take a part in the coming political campaign, and possibly to poll a majority of the Democratic votes of the nation.

LAUD INDIVIDUALISM

But, they think that the most effective course for the party to pursue is to oppose the policies of Roosevelt in logical manner—to assail the communistic and socialistic tendencies of the administration and to exalt American independence and individualism in accordance with the policies of Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the genuine Democratic party.

They know that former Governor Smith has definitely declined to head the Jeffersonian Democratic party as its candidate in the coming campaign, and consequently they are unwilling that his utterances should be accepted as the fundamental principles of that party now in process of formation.

It is understood that Mr. Smith, himself, favors the nomination of ex-Governor Ely of Massachusetts or Talmadge or Douglas as the candidates for President on the Democratic ticket.

ON SIDELINES

He believes that he, himself, can be of service on the sidelines, and undoubtedly he can be if his addresses during the campaign are temperate and convincing, and not violent and antagonizing.

He has a great deal of influence in the country as the latest nominee of the regular Jeffersonian Democracy.

He has a very ardent personal following. His devotees wil be immensely influenced by his address no matter what it is.

But the leaders of the proposed Jeffersonian Democratic party hope that the former governor will do something more—in fact something else than merely make a bitter attack upon the President.

They hope that he will calmly and convincingly, and even courageously, outline the policies of a national Jeffersonian Democratic party and give this new party which is in reality the oldest party in the nation, a propitious launching for the coming campaign.

U. S. Liner Disabled Off Cape Rac

Halifax, N. S., Jan. 15 (AP)—The American steamer, City of Hamburg, of the Baltimore Mail Steamship Line, has been disabled off Cape Race on the Newfoundland coast with nine passengers and a crew of 63 aboard, according to wireless messages picked up here today.

Later messages from the steamer said she was slowly under way and hoped to reach St. Johns without assistance.

SENATE POLL SHOWS BONUS VICTORY IS CERTAIN

During the campaign of '32 Mr. Roosevelt said the bonus should not be paid until there was a cash balance in the treasury to pay it. There is now a deficit, steadily growing larger.

The President vetoed the bonus bill passed at the last session.

All leaders agreed the House would enact the bill over a veto by overwhelming majority. It did so last year when the Patman inflation bonus bill was vetoed, only to die when the Senate supported the President.

Senator Harrison plans to call the measure up in the Senate tomorrow. A vote in two days is probable.

WARNS OF DEBT

This was the situation on Capitol Hill despite the announcement of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau that the government would have to borrow $11,300,000,000 in the next 17 months if the bonus were enacted.

Aside from the bonus, Morgenthau listed $5,800,000,000 of debt refunding operations, $2,000,000,000 for general relief and $1,500,000,000 to meet the deficit in the coming fiscal year as impending federal obligations. All this money, he said, must be raised in excess of current revenues.

For enacting the bill over a veto: 48 Democrats, 15 Republicans, 2 Farmer-Laborites and 1 Progressive; total 66.

To sustain veto: 5 Democrats, 1 Republican; total 6.

In doubt: 4 Democrats, 2 Republicans; total 5.

POLL ON SENATORS

Senator Byrnes (D) of North Carolina, long an administration spokesman, predicted:

"There will be no more than 12 votes against the bill on its passage and less than 30 on enactment over a veto."

So unless all signs fail and in the face of a $35,500,000,000 public debt warning, Congress finally will get rid of the bonus issue.

BOY Happy Flying TO DIE

EDITOR TELLS OF FATAL HOP

Special to the Boston Evening American

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 15—Little Seba Horovitz skipped gaily up and down the aisle of "The Southerner," crack transcontinental plane, on the run from Washington to Nashville.

He was as happy as only a little boy could be, celebrating his fifth birthday and enjoying his first plane ride.

"I'm having a fine time! See my new watch!" he proudly exclaimed, exhibiting his choicest birthday present.

His boyish enthusiasm spread through the ship and turned the voyage through the skies into a picnic.

William S. Howland, managing editor of the Nashville Evening Tennessean, who had the second seat behind Seba, told today of the last happy hours of the child sky traveler, whose young life was to be so suddenly snuffed out. Howland was one of the four passengers to escape death, because they disembarked before the final hop out of Memphis.

Then, as the giant plane roared out of Memphis, Seba got tired—as little boys do when they have had an exciting day. He curled up and went to sleep—safe in his mother's arms.

Then came Death, out of the night to Seba—as the Southerner plunged into an Arkansas swamp, with his mother, Mrs. Samuel Horovitz; his grandmother, Mrs. Israel Horovitz, and 14 others—on Seba's fifth and his last birthday.

Everybody Happy Just Before Fatal Crash

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 15 (AP)—"Everyone on the plane was peaceful—it was an ideal day for flying—a kid amused himself by playing up and down the aisle, and romping with the hostess."

These are recollections of W. M. Taylor, 33-year-old government employe of Washington, D. C., who left the American Airlines' Texas-bound liner at Memphis last night, not long before it crashed near Goodwin, Ark., sending 17 persons to their death.

"I'm flying back home on the train to please my family," he said, "but I think this airplane crash won't keep me from flying in the future.

"The motors never missed a beat. The weather was clear and the air very smooth. Every one on the plane was cheerful and no one seemed to be nervous about flying.

"An elderly woman, a younger woman and a small boy were near me on the ship. The kid amused everyone by playing up and down the aisles, romping with the hostess."

The three were taken to be the Horovitz family.

NEW MAXWELL TRIAL IN DOUBT

Wise, Va., Jan. 15 (AP)—Judge H. A. W. Skeen today denied a new trial to Edith Maxwell, Wise County school teacher under 25-year sentence for the murder of her father, on the constitutional questions involved, but said he would reserve his decision until tomorrow on the question of granting a new trial on the basis of newly discovered evidence.

This evidence includes affidavits of three coroners expressing doubt as to the cause of Trigg Maxwell's death presented by the defense today at a hearing.

These coroners said the autopsy report attributing death to blows on the head did not contain sufficient facts to prove this contention. The affidavits were signed by Dr. James M. Whitfield of Richmond, Dr. A. Magruder McDonald of Washington and Dr. Thomas A. Gonsales, acting medical officer for the Borough of Manhattan, New York.

4 Child Wanderers Sleep in Field

Their "hotel room" last night was a small field behind a billboard, somewhere in Brighton.

Their bedding was the blankets they took from their beds at home before beginning their trip—that was to end in New York.

But the trip to New York is off. The four O'Neils of Cambridge are back home and New York will have to wait until some further date for their personal appearance.

The O'Neils of Cambridge are Eleanor, 13, Catherine, 10, Edward, 8, and Dorothy, 9 years old. They live at 36 Winslow street.

The quartet was interrupted in its trip this morning because there is a policeman attached to the Metropolitan police department named Jeremiah Murphy—an observant type of officer.

Child, Mother, Grandmother Plane Victims

MRS. SAMUEL HOROVITZ SEBA HOROVITZ

Reproduced from a recent painting is this charming portrait of Mrs. Samuel Horovitz of Wakefield and her five-year-old son, Seba, both of whom lost their lives in the crash of an American Airlines plane at Goodwin, Ark., as they were on their way to join Attorney Samuel Horovitz, the child's father, at Los Angeles. Mrs. Israel Horovitz, grandmother of little Seba, also died in the accident.

MRS. ISRAEL HOROVITZ

Ouch!

Edmonton, Alta, Jan. 15 (AP)—Leather straps were prescribed today for Edmonton's unruly school children—if any.

The school board, agreed upon the desirability of corporal punishment, decided to standardize equipment for its administration—straps 16 to 19 inches long, 2 to 2½ inches wide and ⅛ to ¼ inch thick for sixth grades and up, and a 15-inch strap for pupils from the first grade to the fifth.

No attempt was made to standardize the number or weight of blows with an approved strap.

Motor Car of Tomorrow Described by Engineers

Detroit, Jan. 15 (INS)—A well-drawn picture of the motor car of tomorrow—coupled with a call for science to find a flexible substitute for glass—was presented to the 2000 delegates at the national meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers today by three prominent designers.

Salient features of the automobile of the future, as described by Austin M. Wolf and Herbert Chase of New York and E. L. Johnston of Detroit, indicated:

Bodies will be more streamlined than ever.

Motors will be more compact and most of them will be mounted in the rear. Possible barrel-type engines will be developed.

Running boards, a "carry-over from horse and buggy days," will be eliminated, with bodies built flush with wheel hubs and wheels recessed.

Chassis frames will be eliminated by making bodies a unitary structure capable of supporting motor and wheels.

Unsightly underearriage will be enclosed by a plane surface like the sleek underside of the fuselage of an airplane in order to reduce wind resistance.

Drivers will sit well forward where vision is better because "the eyes should be in front as in all forms of animal life."

Interiors will be roomier—a generous-sized room five feet seven inches wide by eight feet long. The interiors will be better ventilated and air-conditioned. Only the drivers' windows will open. Four persons will be able to sit abreast in front seats and other seats will be movable in parlor car fashion.

Knobs and other gadgets on the interior will be eliminated or retractable. All other parts will be better cushioned—to prevent possible injury to occupants in sudden stops or from impacts of crashes. Safety belts for passengers may be developed.

Door handles and other exterior mouldings will give way to push buttons or recessed handles because they set up wind noises at high speeds. Lights will become parts of the bodies instead of separate units. Fenders will be simplified because they represent the greatest cost in making dies for manufacture.

Single, simplified control will be realized.

WILSON Accused of FALSITY

COL. HOUSE'S DIARY READ

Washington, Jan. 15 (AP)—Chairman Nye of the Senate Munitions Committee asserted today that Woodrow Wilson "falsified" in chronicling some of the circumstances surrounding American entrance into the World War.

He attacked Wilson's post-war story that he did not know, at the time this country went into the struggle, of secret treaties between the Allies for the redistribution of Europe.

Nye and Senator Clarke (D.), Missouri, joined in asserting that documents they had read in State Department files and elsewhere, but which they said could not be published, proved both the wartime President and his Secretary of State, Robert Lansing, knew of the treaties.

Secret Pacts

"Wilson and Lansing were fully apprised by Balfour of the secret treaties to which the British were committed," Nye said.

Previously, Clark had charged that Colonel Edward H. House, confidential adviser to Wilson, agreed to bring the United States into war without the knowledge of Congress.

Clark's thrust was based on an agreement between House and Sir Edward Grey, British foreign secretary, for a peace conference. House had backed the proposal with a threat that if Germany refused to agree the United States "probably" would join the Allies.

Evidence that England jeopardized wartime relations with this country at one point by publishing a "blacklist" of "unfriendly" American industrial firms was also introduced.

Excerpts from Colonel House's diary notations of June 23, 1916, said:

"I am, I must admit, about at the end of my patience with Great Britain and the Allies. This black list business is the last straw. I am seriously considering asking Congress to authorize me to prohibit loans and restrict exportations to the Allies.

"It is becoming clear to me that there lies latent in this policy the wish to prevent our merchants getting a foothold in markets which Great Britain has hitherto controlled and all but dominated.

"Polk and I are compounding a very sharp note. I may feel obliged to make it as sharp and final as the one to Germany on the submarines."

U. S. Threat

In his diary House also expressed belief the French and English were prolonging the war unnecessarily and were "stupid to refuse our proffered intervention on the terms I proposed in Paris and London."

"I made it clear to both governments that in the event of intervention we would not countenance a peace that did not bring with it a plan which would make for permanent peace, as far as human foresight could do so," the diary continued.

"If Germany refused to acquiesce in such a settlement, I promised we would take the part of the Allies and try to force it. It would mean the end of militarism, but it would also mean an end of navalism, and that perhaps is where the shoe pinches."

$500 Bail Frees Beauty On Bogus Bill Charge

Girl's Story Puzzles Police

MISS SOFIA JAGIELLO
Police Disconcerted

It was very disconcerting to detectives at police headquarters today.

A girl whose beauty out-dazzled even the show-up lights in which she stood, snapped back angrily at them while they questioned her regarding a counterfeit $100 bill.

The girl was Miss Sophia Jagiello, 27, of Dawes street, Dorchester, one of the prettiest ever to appear at headquarters, and she was charged with larceny in connection with the alleged passing of the bill in a Stoughton street, Dorchester, grill.

"I want you to understand that I'm a decent, respectable girl," she said spiritedly to Captain Thomas F. Connolly, "I'm a school teacher. I'm on the reserve list. I prepared for my profession at Dorchester high school, Teachers' College and at a private school."

"Where are you working now?" asked Captain Connolly.

"I can't get a position," she replied. "For Heaven's sake, why don't you get me a job? I've ability and education."

"I have more to do with police work than with getting jobs for girls arrested for passing counterfeit $100 bills," said Connolly. "How about this bill?"

"There are girls teaching school today who haven't the background I have," declared the striking brunette, her dark eyes flashing.

"That's enough about your education," said Connolly. "Let's get back to the $100 bill business."

The girl told police the bill had been given her by a Chicago man whom she met five years ago at a Harvard-Yale dance, and whom she named.

While he was in Boston then he became ill, she said, and prevailed upon her to pawn her 16-stone diamond ring, valued at $275.

Not until two weeks ago, when he came East to visit his sister in Addison road, Brookline, did she hear from him again, she declared, and then he invited her to dinner at a downtown hotel, giving her the $100 bill at the dinner "as part of the money he owed me." He also promised to get her a job.

"I didn't know the $100 bill was a counterfeit," she protested. "I presumed it was all right. I haven't seen my friend since the night he gave me the bill."

Miss Jagiello, whose name does not appear on the current Boston teachers' reserve list, according to school officials, was arraigned later in Dorchester court, charged with larceny of $100.

She pleaded not guilty, the case was continued to January 21 and she was released in $500 bail.

Records were produced in court showing that in 1931 the girl was arrested under the name of Barbara Joyce and charged with the larceny of $100 taken with some other girl's handbag from a party. The alleged larceny was merely an error in handbags, the girl explained at that time, and upon making restitution the case was filed. She explained the name "Barbara Joyce" by stating it was a stage name she had taken.

NEW Version of BIBLE

ANCIENT STONE TELLS OF BAAL

Moscow, Jan. 15 (AP)—Fragments of ancient Phoenician Temple records, which Bolshevists say cast new light on biblical stories, were made public here today.

A 4000-year-old tablet, discovered in Syria in 1930 by a French expedition, was deciphered by the Soviet Oriental language expert, I. Ravrevy, from previously untranslatable inscriptions.

As constructed by Ravrevy from the badly-damaged tablet, it said:

"Baal opened the windows of heaven. And with his voice Baal thundered. And Baal revealed his mysteries. He lighted the valleys and encircled the mountains.

"Baal's cyclone embraced the forests. It crackled and roared up to the edges of the valley.

"Said Alaan-Baal: 'The bituvium is raging. Do not fear, do not fear, we will restore you from the disasters.'"

Ravrevy said he believed the tablet had been inscribed 4000 years ago, and referred to a period 1000 years before that.

The records were found, according to accounts published here, by French archaeologists in the ruins of a temple unearthed at Razshamra, the site of ancient Phoenicia.

Another passage, as translated by the Soviet expert, read as follows:

"Baal died. Together with him we will step down in his tomb. The light of gods is sobbing and with her tears she is satisfied.

"She swallows her tears like wine. And she—Shapash, the light of gods—said 'put me on the body of Alaan-Baal.' She put the body upon the shoulders of Anast and to the summit of Saphon has carried him, and having wept over him buried him in the cavern of the gods of the earth."

Next Elliott Job Dress Rehearsal For Bruno Doom

Slayer of Budd Girl And Voodoo Killer To Die Tomorrow

Robert G. Elliott has another "off day" today—another brief respite in his tour of death, in which he's scheduled to kill eight men in as many days. But he'll make up for it tomorrow. He has two to kill tomorrow at Sing Sing—Numbers Six and Seven on his list of doomed.

Win Brooks, of the Boston Evening American staff, who was at Elliott's side at the start of this ghastly tour, still is with him. He tells about the executioner's plans for tomorrow night in the vivid story below.

He'll be with Elliott then. He'll also be with Elliott Friday night at Trenton—unless Governor Hoffman of New Jersey postpones the date of Bruno Richard Hauptmann's execution. Hauptmann is Number Eight on Elliott's list.

By WIN BROOKS

New York, Jan. 15—He had a five-hour start out of Boston but I knew the way he came.

I left him in the death house at Charlestown coiling a length of cable in the manner of a sailor coiling rope. He looked pretty tired. The chair looked satisfied, like something fed. Miller Frank Clark, fingers clenched like the talons of an eagle shot in flight, lay behind the screen.

Warden Francis J. W. Lanagan and I walked up from the death house together.

"They couldn't go much better than that," I said.

"No," he agreed.

FIVE DOWN AND THREE TO GO.

I knew he would have a head start because I had work to do; but I knew where the trail of the executioner would lead.

* * *

Two women sat ahead of me coming down on the Clipper and I was trying to do some work but they were chattering worse than telegraph instruments in a newspaper office. They were sailing abroad and I guess they wanted everyone to know it.

After a while they began talking about Bruno Hauptmann and Elliott; they were discussing politics and whatever effect it might have on the case.

One said:

"What do you think will happen?"

The other said:

"I think Elliott will burn him Friday and if he won't, I will."

She was rather a nice looking woman, of middle age. But her boat sails tomorrow night.

* * *

Tomorrow night isn't the night for Hauptmann. It's the night for Albert Howard Fish and John Smith. Another Black Thursday at Sing Sing. In the concentration of the public interest on Hauptmann, Fish and Smith are all but forgotten.

ELLIOTT WON'T FORGET THEM.

* * *

Fish and Smith will be No. 6 and No. 7 on Elliott's 41200 list of eight-in-eight.

Fish is 65 years old and the same type of man as Miller Frank Clark, maybe worse, and he will probably look better and feel better dead.

Fish is convict 90,272 on the records of New York State. Descriptions of him range all the way from "sexagenarian house painter" to "goat bearded Dracula." He is a death's head.

Fish committed one of the most infamous murders in New York State. On June 3, 1928, he enticed 10-year-old Grace Budd from her home, murdered her, dismembered her body with a meat cleaver and a saw and buried it. Later he returned to the scene, reassembled it, buried it again.

He wasn't caught until December 16, 1934. Fish led police to the grave.

Fish was caught because he persisted in writing horrible letters to the mother of the little girl he had killed. Detective William H. King, who stayed on the case six years, trapped him.

Anyone at Sing Sing will throw the switch on Fish if Elliott should fail.

BUT ELLIOTT DOESN'T FAIL.

* * *

This John Smith is a different kind of case. He is 41, a native of Harlem where he is known as "Old Doc Voodoo" because, until the restrictions of the death house cut short his activities, he practiced black magic among his kind.

Smith's right leg is wood. He lost his at one while serving on the Mexican border with the 10th Cavalry in 1915.

He returned to Harlem and undertook to drive the evil spirits out of any and all houses at request, and was supposed to have been very successful. Though he never tried the death house.

He fell in love with a girl named Jane Cumbar and he thought she was in love with him. But on July 16, 1934, while strolling in McCombs dam park, he came upon Jane and a man named James Wilson. Looking at them, he became suddenly convinced that Jane didn't love him but loved Wilson, so he pulled out a gun and shot both dead.

He will need all his magic

WHEN HE FACES ELLIOTT.

* * *

Joe Harrington of the New York Journal and International News was telling about Elliott's predecessor, John W. Hulbert, who threw the switch on 140 condemned killers.

Hulbert, he says, was a bald, nervous little man. He lived in Auburn and he retired as executioner with the heebie-jeebies. Neighbors said he had told them he was "sick of killing people."

Well, being executioner no longer, and having nobody else to kill, he killed himself. He blew his brains out one night. He used the gun he carried to protect himself while executioner.

Hulbert killed himself, Elliott says, because he was in ill health and believed he was going blind.

* * *

One of the strangest of all stories picked up on the trail of the executioner is the story of Paul V. Hurley, 19, of Roxbury, Mass.

When he was about 17 years old he read a magazine story about Elliott and he couldn't forget it. He was embarked on petty crime at the time but, as strong an impression as the story made, it failed to benefit him.

Instead of reforming, he became convinced that he was doomed to meet Elliott, that the executioner was his Nemesis, that their eventual get-together was foreordained.

Whether it was foreordained or not, they met.

On September 15, 1921, Hurley fired nine shots into Patrolman Joseph P. O'Brien, of Brookline, when the officer stepped him in the street to question him about suspicious actions.

Waiting in the death house, a week before the date set for his execution, he said he believed neither in God nor man-made law.

But when the night came, and Elliott waited for him, Hurley confessed his sins and walked to the meeting place under the bright globe with the Rev. Ralph W. Farrell, the Catholic chaplain, by his side.

He was the youngest person Elliott had ever put to death in the prison.

* * *

At Charlestown Warden Lanagan explained a problem I brought up the other day: Why it requires a half hour to execute three men in Massachusetts and only 18 minutes for four in New York.

His explanation was a question:

The answer is one. At Charlestown it is three and four. The added examinations take up the extra time.

ELLIOTT CAN PUT THEM TO [illegible] AS QUICKLY IN CHARLESTOWN AS ANYWHERE.

(Charlestown or Sing Sing, Bellefonte or Trenton—Elliott can kill them just the same. Tomorrow night it will be two at Sing Sing. Mr. Brooks will still be with Elliott tomorrow, and he'll tell about the executioner's approach to jobs Numbers Six and Seven.)

Jewish Leaders Sail for America

Southampton, England, Jan. 15 (AP)—Three leaders of Britain's Jewry, Sir Herbert Samuel, Viscount Bearsted and Simon Marks, sailed for New York aboard the Majestic today to discuss Jewish relief measures with American leaders.

REPRIEVE BRUNO'S BEST HOPE, WIFE TELLS HIM

thing to do," she said. "I will do everything to help Richard. It might be good to see the governor.

"Bruno is confident and not a bit nervous. Somehow he doesn't seem to have the least fear that he will die Friday night.

"I asked him if he wanted to see the baby, and he said: 'You know what the baby means to me, but I won't see him here. I'll see him somewhere else.'"

HOPE IN REPRIEVE

But while Bruno was talking so confidently to his wife, prison electricians were testing the electric chair only a few steps from where he sat; and they pronounced it ready.

Col. Kimberling said that neither Mrs. Hauptmann nor the two attorneys mentioned last night's action by Federal Circuit Judge J. Warren Davis in denying a writ of habeas corpus and a stay of execution, and that Hauptmann did not see.

TWO TO AID HIM

It was announced that two ministers—the Rev. John Matthiesen, his spiritual adviser, and the Rev. John Goerlicy, prison chaplain—would accompany Hauptmann to the execution room.

Attorneys were not very hopeful of success in further court efforts, but the possibility of a reprieve buoyed their spirits as the designated date of execution drew nearer.

Governor Hoffman announced today through his press aide, William Conklin, that he had "reached no decision" on the question of a reprieve.

Conklin said the governor was continuing his private investigation of the case and was seeking legal advice upon his power to reprieve at this late date.

Hoffman was quoted by Conklin as saying that it was "not necessary" for him to grant a reprieve if court proceedings were under way in an attempt to save the Bronx carpenter's life, since courts could stay the execution.

The governor declined to answer a question as to whether he would reprieve Hauptmann in the event of a confession.

Faint Hope for Bruno In Legal Actions

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 15—Between Bruno Richard Hauptmann and death in the electric chair Friday night, there now stands only one man—Harold G. Hoffman, governor of New Jersey.

There was no indication here today that any move will be made to block a reprieve on the question of its legality.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz, chief prosecuting officer, who argued yesterday against a writ of habeas corpus in Federal Court—a writ which was denied—is not likely to make any legal move to prohibit Hoffman from granting a reprieve.

Yesterday's hearing on application for a writ of habeas corpus was in Federal Court here before Judge J. Warren Davis, who denied the application, which would have set Hauptmann temporarily free for trial in New York for extortion.

Judge Davis also refused to grant Hauptmann's counsel permission to appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals, and refused to issue a stay of execution so they could go to the United States Supreme Court at Washington.

With the ink still wet on a petition Hauptmann had signed in the death house, Chief Counsel Lloyd Fisher and his four associates called upon Judge Davis late in the day, and asked that he hear them immediately.

Wilentz was summoned and handed a copy of the petition—which set forth three chief reasons for intervention of the Federal courts. They were:

1—That the jury at Flemington had not been protected from "mob spirit" and remarks by interested persons.

2—That Attorney-General Wilentz had been intemperate in his remarks to the jury, especially in saying:

"Hauptmann is cold—yes! But he will be thawed out when he hears that switch!"

3—That defense counsel have recently "learned" that the original nursery kidnap note was in the possession of persons other than Col. Lindbergh and police officials and thus might have been copied.

Counsel, judge and newspapermen adjourned to a hearing room and there followed a small scale repetition of the "trial of a century" with spectators fighting for seats.

Neil Burkinshaw of Washington, an experienced pleader in federal courts, presented Hauptmann's plea, eloquently citing the three points and declaring:

"The jury had to push through dense crowds, eat in a dining room where conversation of others was audible to them, and listen to outbursts of spectators."

WILENTZ DEFENDS SELF

Nugent Dodds, Burkinshaw's associate, called into the case at the 11th hour, attacked the tenor of Wilentz's trial summation and cited federal definitions of a fair prosecutor as one who "may strike hard blows but must not strike foul blows."

Wilentz, still the dapper, shrewd counsellor who guided the prosecution during six weeks at Flemington, defended himself and his associates. With a bow to "the distinguished gentlemen from Washington," he said:

"Regardless of the rules of law, if there was one change in the status of this case with reference to new evidence, counsel would not be here. The prosecutor himself would have gone into court in Hauptmann's behalf.

"But today they advance exactly the same grounds as they have from the first—improper sequestration of the jury, and 'mob spirit.'"

Wilentz then repeated what he has said so many times before—that Hauptmann's attorneys (then headed by Edward J. Reilly, Brooklyn lawyer since dismissed by Hauptmann, did not during the trial object to what was going on.

Describing the Union Hotel at Flemington as "a great big place," Wilentz declared that state's witnesses were kept from the jury, and that it was among defense witnesses and lawyers that the jury ate their meals in the hotel dining-room. He added:

"It was all right for the defense to attack Dr. John F. Condon and Mrs. Morrow, but if we called Hauptmann a murderer—we were being unfair!"

He denied any pertinence to defense claims regarding the nursery note, or the Fisch letters, and declared:

"They're attempting to persuade your honor in effect to reverse the United States Supreme Court. There is not a scintilla of weight to their argument, and we appeal to your honor to refuse the writ."

LAUDS TRENCHARD

Judge Davis, a white-haired man in civilian clothes, opened his discussion with the statement:

"I have known Judge Trenchard, who is familiar with this case, and who tried it, for many years. I argued criminal cases before him years ago. And in my belief if the trial was held before Justice Trenchard, it was a fair trial.

"If this man is electrocuted, he will not die without having had the benefit of excellent counsel. They have done everything possible, and rightly so. But I must deny their application."

Poor Richard to Wife

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 15 (AP)—The man in the death house with the destiny to die Friday night is known to his wife as "Poor Richard."

She always refers to Bruno Richard Hauptmann by his middle name. Since his clemency appeal was denied Saturday she has come more and more to speak of him as "Poor Richard."

Bruno Won't Tell, Says Dr. Jastrow

New York, Jan. 15 (AP)—Dr. Joseph Jastrow said today Bruno Richard Hauptmann "has not shown any signs of being influenced" by psychological factors which might force him to tell, at the hour of his electrocution, the "whole story" of the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby.

"He is definitely of the secretive type, the withholding type," said Dr. Jastrow, who ranks as one of the leaders in conservative psychology. "I should not expect a change in his attitude."

"Formerly, I think, the tendency was stronger than it is today. The damnation belief that a man must do something to save his soul, the influence of the scriptures and of the confessional have been strong factors toward confession.

"Hauptmann has not shown any signs of being influenced by these factors.

"There is a type of evasion which is pathological.

"Personally, I do not expect anything from Hauptmann. His answers about the ladder indicated a tendency toward evasion. No lawyer could get him to make direct answers.

STATE PAYMENT OF CAMPAIGNS URGED

Assumption by the state of every legitimate political campaign and election expense is urged by Attorney General Paul A. Dever in his annual recommendations to the Legislature.

But to avoid any hastily adopted statute, he further suggested that a recess commission be appointed to make a study of conduct of political campaigns with authority to recommend such proposals as the commission feels would be practical.

The increasingly large expenditures made necessary under the present practice, where expenditures of funds by a candidate for public office are "totally disproportionate to the proprieties of an election" is denounced by the attorney general as "one of the great menaces to truly responsive democratic government."

WITH LARGE SUMS

These expenditures he lists as competition with candidates with large sums of money at their disposal, modern inventions for the dissemination of propaganda, and demands of the electorate.

However legitimate the objects for which they are incurred, Dever pointed out, the demands for heavy campaign spending "often makes tempting the offer of contributions from those who have a special interest to serve."

IMPARTIAL OPPORTUNITY

Several other items of necessary campaign expenditures might be well assumed by the Commonwealth, he declared.

The bulletin of information would give the duly nominated candidates of each political party an impartial opportunity for statements regarding the qualifications and issues which they are attempting to present to the public.

While the bandit, the gangster, the racketeer and other more or less organized violators of the law are relatively but a small majority, the attorney general declared that they are a "pressing danger" and must be fought with means and methods at least the equal of the criminals.

"We cannot permit the poison of the law-breaking activities of these parasites on society, or the corruption of their anti-social, and calloused greed for money and underworld power to challenge and impair the integrity of our institutions and the morality of our people," he declared.

TRANSFER FAVORED

After a year of intensive study relating to fraudulent business practices, the attorney general recommends:

1—Transfer of the Securities Division of the Public Utilities Department to the Department of Banking and Insurance.

2—Complete authority to the attorney general to institute injunction proceedings in the Supreme or Superior courts, whenever he believes and finds from evidence satisfactory to him that any person or others has or is engaged in fraudulent practices.

3—Making it a misdemeanor for any broker or salesman to make a representation, either written or oral, direct or indirect, to a prospective customer, for the purpose of inducing the sale of any security, that the security has been qualified under the Sale of Securities Act without disclosing to the customer at the time that the qualification does not evidence its economic value.

4—Require, where a statement of portfolio holdings of securities is filed with the securities division, physical inspection to ascertain the existence of such securities.

Office Wrecked In $25 Safe Job

Lowell, Jan. 15—The first safe-blowing job that has occurred here in recent years was discovered today by Russell Lumber Company employes when they reported for work at the Meadcroft street lumber offices.

The combination knob had been hammered off the safe, which contained only about $25. Into the knob opening some explosive had been poured and ignited. The resultant explosion upset office furniture, scattered papers and disarranged pictures hanging on the walls.

ACTS TWO WAYS AT ONCE

THE SENATOR SAYS:

Al Fish Lined Up For Job With Freddie

George Donovan, of Southie, Also to Be Placed; Agawam 'Grief' in Sight

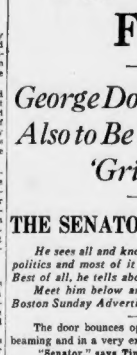
THE SENATOR:

He sees all and knows all that's going on in Massachusetts politics and most of it he finds amusing or amazing, or both. Best of all, he tells about it.

Meet him below and listen in with him regularly in the Boston Sunday Advertiser and Boston Evening American.

The door bounces open and The Senator comes in and he is beaming and in a very expansive mood, indeed.

"Senator," says Timmie, "if it wasn't for the sound of your hardening arteries, it would occur to me that you have become a proud papa."



THE SENATOR

Now The Senator is very sensitive about his arteries and the boys only snigger a little at Timmie's crack.

But The Senator does not take offense this time at Timmie, and The Senator says:

"We are going into society, Timmie, and the society we go into is one that has the Indian sign, or Tammany."

"This is very interesting, indeed, Senator," says Timmie, "but who do you mean by we?"

"Bring Timmie With You"

At this The Senator pulls a white envelope out of his pocket and it is addressed to The Senator.

"I have received here, Timmie," says The Senator, beaming, "an invitation to attend the 35th annual reunion and ball of the Tammany Club, which is a reception to Governor Jim. And there is a P. S. scratched on the bottom and this P. S. says, 'Bring Timmie with you and meet real Indians.'"

The Senator tells Timmie to set them up all around and around, and then The Senator says:

"I am walking down School street, Timmie, when I hear that two of our city councillors, who were cast adrift in the last election, are about to dock. I hear that Al Fish of Dorchester will get an appointment as deputy soldiers' relief commissioner from Mayor Freddie and that George Donovan of Southie will get a welfare job."

Well, Timmie is busy drawing this and shaking that and he does not answer, so The Senator resumes:

"I also have my other ear bent, Timmie, with the news that Payson Smith, who is given the old heave-ho as state education commissioner, is being readied by prominent educators to go out for governor and is being promised the solid teacher-and-relatives vote all over.

"More than this, Timmie, I also hear that Fitchburg is after Smith to be superintendent of schools up there, and that another city, much larger than Fitchburg, stands ready to adopt him as superintendent at a figure which many would call ready money.

Springfield Gets Convention

"I am also advised, confidentially, of course, Timmie," adds The Senator, "that Worcester does not get the Democratic state convention after all when the balmy breezes blow, because the folding money up there has not been unfolded.

"The convention," continues The Senator, "will probably go to Springfield, where the merchants are agreeable to standing the $5000 expense."

With this The Senator takes a long haul on his long-neglected glass, and it is a very satisfactory haul, because The Senator shakes himself like a wet Newfoundland before he picks it up again.

"I hear also, Timmie, that there is more grief coming in the Agawam krack mattar, what with a well-known concern holding the bag in the matter of $240,000 and a lad who is very angry indeed about being stuck for some $70,000 worth."

Divorced Wives Swap Mates, Plan Weddings

Reno, Nev., Jan. 15 (AP)—Two chummy Reno-divorced women plan to exchange husbands and try marriage again, each unperturbed by the other's description of her erstwhile spouse as "cruel."

Mrs. Gladys J. Burnett and Mrs. Desiree D. Werder, who were neighbors in Redwood City, Cal., shared an apartment here while awaiting the decrees. Their husbands, Roy E. Burnett, Jr., and William M. Werder, "hatched" together in Redwood City.

Harry Swanson, attorney for both women, said each would marry the other's ex-husband "as soon as the excitement of the divorce blows over."

Swanson said Mrs. Werder would marry Burnett "within a month or two" and that Mrs. Burnett and Werder might marry sooner.

L. E. Werder, father of William, a former Stanford track star, escorted both his future and former daughter-in-laws to the courthouse. Until the exchange is completed, he also will take care of the Werder's five-month-old daughter, Betty Lee.

Mrs. Werder after obtaining her divorce yesterday, left at once for California with her husband-to-be, an oil company employe.

Whereabouts of the other couple, divorced Friday, were not known.

CRIME, Incorporated

THE INSIDE STORY OF THE RACKETS -:- -:- By MARTIN MOONEY

MARTIN MOONEY

Good Reporter Never Betrays Source of News

Mooney arrived from Hollywood on Monday, prepared to serve a 30-day jail sentence for contempt of court, a sentence incurred when he refused to divulge sources of information received as a New York American reporter.

Mooney's counsel, James D. C. Murray, yesterday officially notified the district attorney of New York County that he is prepared to surrender Mooney on court order.

Today's installment of "CRIME, INCORPORATED" reveals for the first time how and why Mooney wouldn't tell, and couldn't tell if he would—ethics of his profession forbid his disclosing sources of information; the emissaries of "CRIME, INCORPORATED" would have put him "on the spot" if he had opened his mouth.

By MARTIN MOONEY

CHAPTER THREE

THE most dangerous moment in the life of a crime reporter occurs not in tracking down a murderer or in following the police chase of a notorious killer but right in his own newspaper office.

There comes a time, no matter how fine the crime reporter's reputation and past record may be, when his editor calls him to the desk and asks, "Where did you get that information?" When that happens, the crime reporter is on the worst spot he will ever find himself.

If he gives his editor the answer, then he is disclosing his contacts and his sources of crime news, giving another man the name or identity of persons with whom he has established a confidence as implicit as that of the confessional or doctor's office. If he doesn't answer, then he faces the prospect of losing his job.

Martin Mooney, New York crime reporter, left, is shown examining a G-man's gun used in the war on crime. The firearms expert is explaining the method of loading a trip-gun with a tear gas cartridge.

In all fairness to those editors who know their business, it isn't very often they will ask their crime reporters the one question that they realize is sacred. But human curiosity is such that even the best of editors, some of them crime reporters once themselves, will ask:

"Where did you get it?"

A good crime reporter will never tell. He can't afford to tell. Every other reporter in the office is brought up under the strict and inviolate dictum that the editor must be told everything and that it is up to him, and not the reporter, to choose what to print or not to print. But the crime reporter must tell only that which he knows will not endanger his contacts and news sources. His editor must take it and like it—and usually does just that.

With his editor the crime reporter must establish the same feeling of confidence that he establishes between himself and his news sources. Then there remains only one thing—the stories he gives to the editor for publication must stand up. His information must be holeproof, must be correct at least eight out of ten times.

Of the dozen or so newspapermen in the country who have been given jail terms for refusing absolutely to disclose the source of crime news, I am one.

Crusade On

With fanfare and ballyhoo the District Attorney of New York City inaugurated a vice and gambling investigation to get the so-called higher-ups of the numbers racket and those gentlemen who are always referred to in the press as "financiers." The game of numbers nets racketeers in the New York area $500,000,000 a year.

This figure was given to the district attorney from the witness stand by a man who everyone had reason to believe knew what he was talking about. It spurred the district attorney on to greater effort.

When, at the peak of the investigation period, a Special Grand Jury was impaneled and no higher-up had been disclosed, I was assigned to the story.

"Go out and see what's going on in the racket?" was the way I was instructed. "How is it working, where is it working and is the District Attorney going to get any place?"

So for ten days during which the District Attorney and police were supposed to be exerting practically superhuman efforts to get at the root of the numbers racket in New York City, I stayed out on my assignment.

After making my contacts, I actually lived with men higher up in the racket ranks. I did not wear a false beard and colored glasses and pose as a man who wanted to get into the business. I remained myself—a newspaper reporter.

Those men who knew me passed the word along that I would not break a confidence and would not sell anything anywhere to incriminate them. They believed in my integrity as a crime reporter.

As a result I saw with my eyes and heard with my ears what was going on in the racket. I played the numbers game in places ranging wide open. I saw thousands collected and sat in a comfortable little roadster while a collector for the game made his rounds and stuffed hundreds of dollars into a side pocket of the car because he was in a hurry to clean up on his beat.

I was told by men running the game in various shops and stores how they received protection. I learned the name of the district leader politician who was involved in the racket. I learned how Crime, Incorporated, fitted in the racket, how the pay-off was made to the crime combine.

My Story

After ten days I returned to my editor, detailed what I had seen and heard. During the period of my investigation the hue and cry of the law-enforcement officials continued unabated.

"Write a series of articles telling what you have seen and heard," my city editor ordered.

I wrote the articles and they were published. Naturally they caused a furor for I said that I had uncovered the facts during a period when city officials were beginning to wonder whether they were going to find out anything at all about the racket.

My editor pointed out in a preface to the articles that my stories were not being printed as legal evidence, but as interesting reading matter for the population of New York.

Every day for a week the articles were published. The investigation by the district attorney, the police and the special grand jury was still going on. It was made very clear that one man in 10 days had uncovered all the information presented.

Naturally the implication was that, if one man could do what I did in ten days, what could a force of 20,000 police do in the same period. I had told of the taunting remarks made by those in the racket concerning the possibility of the law getting them.

The racketeers scoffed at the attempt of the district attorney and police to crush the racket. As usual the racketeers had authentic information, for the vice and gambling crusade fizzled.

But meanwhile the articles I had written stung the city officials as sharply as an angry hornet—with the same sort of result, a quick inflammatory swelling with a great howl. A subpoena was issued by the grand jury demanding my presence.

"We want full details of your investigation and charges made in your articles," the foreman of the Grand Jury intoned. "We want the right names and right addresses of the people and places you have mentioned."

Not even my editor knew those or ever would know them from me. But I didn't bother to tell that to the gentlemen of the Grand Jury and the District Attorney. I simply refused to answer their questions. I pointed out to them that a "squealer" in the best crime circles doesn't usually remain around to squeal again.

"We will give you a few days to think this over," they graciously informed me. "If you continue along this line you will be liable to charges of contempt."

How well I knew it. My editors backed me in my determination not to break confidence with those men who had trusted me. Naturally, it wasn't because I was even contemplating turning informer that I pointed out to the grand jury that my life would be in danger if I talked out of turn.

What I was defending was my own integrity as a newspaperman. A reporter who breaks a confidence is finished in his business as surmurely as a bank clerk who embezzles funds. A wire from the chief of my newspaper was heartening. He congratulated me on my stand, told me to stick to my guns. I was his type of reporter.

Underworld Mum

But the one thing that pleased me above everything was the confidence reposed in me by the crime combine. During the few days of grace given me by the grand jury before they put me through another inquisition I had subconsciously expected a reminder from the big boys that they would appreciate my staying silent.

But no such word came. I received numerous telephone calls from reputable citizens congratulating me on my stand. A flood of letters expressed the same sentiment. But my friends of the racket's had faith that I would not crack.

That meant more to me than anything else. They trusted me. Long afterward, however, I was told a strange story by two racketeers connected with the numbers racket I had written about.

"You know, fellow," one of them said as we stood at a midtown bar, "for a time we had it fixed up good for you. We weren't doin' nothin,' Tim and me, and we got a little shack way up in the Catskills. We talked it over with the boss and came damn near takin' you up there on the quiet.

"Just have you disappear quiet like for about a couple of weeks. Boy, your paper would've loved it. Those headlines 'Reporter Kidnaped' would've been worth a million to you. But we got a call to take a quick trip to Detroit, so we let it lay."

When I later told my editor of the kidnap plot that never materialized, he snorted:

"You might have gotten a stick on page 19," he said sarcastically. "Who in hell cares whether a reporter is kidnaped or not."

But there was a note of sorrow in his voice, for the story would have been a honey.

Recalled before the Grand Jury, I again refused to amplify my statements. Thereupon my stand was met with one of the strangest propositions ever to be made to a newspaper reporter by the law.

BATTLE RAGES IN SOUTHERN ETHIOPIA

London, Jan. 15 (AP)—Italy claimed today her southern armies had crushed a gathering Ethiopian drive on the Dolo front, "repulsing and pursuing" the enemy.

A Communique from Marshal Pietro Badoglio, Italian high commander in Africa, said the Somaliland forces had driven back the armies of Ras Desta Demtu in a "vigorous action," but added:

"Fighting continues along the entire front. Our losses so far have not been serious."

Nothing was said about Ethiopian losses.

From Addis Ababa came an official Ethiopian report of a surprise engagement by Ras Seyoum's troops against an Italian detachment January 2 in which 65 Italians were killed.

The Communique said six Ethiopian warriors died, nine more were wounded, and arms, mules and food were captured.

BRITISH CABINET MEETS

The British Cabinet met to instruct Foreign Secretary Eden on his course regarding fresh penalties against Italy at the League of Nations council session Monday.

Authoritative sources predicted that when Eden arrived at Geneva he would carry pledges of British participation in further sanctions against the aggressor nation in the East African war.

Premier Pierre Laval of France persisted in his "wait-and-see" policy on war settlement proposals as he moved to strengthen his domestic position amid a political struggle in the radical Socialist party.

Fourteen of France's greatest submarines set out today from Brest for maneuvers off Morocco, Northwest Africa, in advance of the remainder of the Atlantic fleet which sails tomorrow for the movements.

SWEDISH PROTEST

A third nation dispatched a formal protest to Italy for Fascist bombings in Ethiopian aerial attacks when the Swedish minister presented a note at Rome.

The Swedish government, following the examples of Emperor Haile Selassie and the Egyptian government, charged the bombing at Dessye December 30 was a direct attack on a Red Cross ambulance. One Swedish subject was fatally injured and another wounded.

Persons responsible for the air raids are expected to be taken to account, Sweden told Italy after rejecting a Fascist declaration the assault was in reprisal for Ethiopian violation of international laws of war.

MRS. BITNER NANCY BITNER LAURENCE S. BITNER

BITNER ANNIVERSARY

Notables Hail Pair 25 Years Wed

Notables in business and civic life were among the 150 guests to honor Mr. and Mrs. Laurence S. Bitner of Spooner road, Chestnut Hill, on their 25th wedding anniversary, at the Charles River Country Club.

A feature of the event was a mock wedding in which Mrs. Lee Court of Canton was the "bride" and George E. Sexton, the "bridegroom." Robert Holdsworth of Brookline performed the "ceremony."

The clubhouse was illuminated with tiny silver candles, with a blue and silver color scheme. The "bridal" couple entered the assembly in a chariot drawn by two guests costumed as Alaskan miners, recalling Mr. Bitner's activities in Alaska previous to his marriage.

On behalf of the guests, William H. McLeod presented the couple an ornate silver service made in San Francisco, from the same pattern and by the same concern from which the couple purchased their wedding silverware.

Guests included Lynn N. Bitner, brother of the host, and Mrs. Bitner of Rochester, N. Y., and the following:

Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Filene, Dr. Fred Blumenthal, Mr. and Mrs. Jay R. Benton, Mr. and Mrs. James Dusne, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Shumaker, Mr. and Mrs. Neal O'Hara, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Raphael, Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Kirstein, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Holdsworth.

Mrs. S. Preston Moses, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Slater, Mrs. Joseph Fallon, Colonel and Mrs. George Bunnell, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Benton, Mrs. Maude E. Brennan, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Chapin, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cavanaugh, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Johnston, Dr. and Mrs. William Browne.

Mr. and Mrs. John Reardon, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Frost, Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. James Quinn, Mr. Louis Marchant, Mr. and Mrs. Wells Gregory, Miss Edith Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Court, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Arnold and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Kearns.

LAWYER PLANS TO APPEAL ON 'CONTEMPT'

Salem, Jan. 15—Adjudged in contempt for refusing to reveal the name of a woman hit-and-run driver, but with his jail commitment delayed until Friday, Attorney Joseph B. Harrington today planned to bring his case into the Supreme Court.

It was revealed by Attorney Francis Rafter, counsel for Harrington, that when his case came up Friday he would secure a writ of habeas corpus immediately after the court commited him to jail.

Under the writ he would be brought at once to Boston before the Supreme Judicial Court.

In the event the latter court ruled Harrington must divulge the information, the young attorney will do so, Rafter said.

Defending his refusal to name the woman in court yesterday, Harrington contended the name of his woman client was a privileged communication.

He said he could not reveal her name as it was against her wishes.

His citation for contempt came after Judge David Dillon had dismissed a civil suit, known as a bill of discovery, brought by counsel for two Peabody boys, injured by an auto in Peabody last March.

Judge Dillon dismissed the bill, stating that Dillon was not a prospective witness nor an attorney for either party, and added it was a matter for police instead of the courts.

Hyde Park Boy Eludes Capture

Renewed search was on today for George Garco, 16, of Hyde Park avenue, Hyde Park, who has thrice eluded police capture. A .38 caliber revolver and a change of clothing were found in a barn in the rear of Hamilton street, Mattapan, which, police believe was used by the youth.

Garco's last escape was from the Lyman school where he had been sentenced after he confessed to 29 housebreaks.

Safety is not a dream

The press of the country has acquainted the public with the shocking facts about automobile accidents. And the public has deplored the country's record of sudden death and worse than death.

TO promote street and highway safety there is need for more than public lamentation. It needs the conscientious observance of common-sense practices of driving and walking—practices that are founded on the simple truth that haste breeds accidents.

It needs the impartial, continuous, intelligent efforts of police and courts to enforce traffic laws, and the whole-hearted support of the public in behalf of such action. In the maintenance of enforcement agencies the public is paying for protection to life and property, whether that protection is secured or not.

A few cities can boast of substantial progress in automobile accident prevention. In these communities, speed limits are enforced, traffic lights and other protective devices and measures are respected, and widespread "fixing" of arrest tickets has become a thing of the past.

These cities have saved lives by reducing their accidents. They have demonstrated that street and highway safety is not a dream.

Whether 1936 will record 36,000 or more automobile accident deaths, a million persons injured, and an economic loss of untold millions of dollars, depends largely upon how many communities effectively employ methods that are getting results.

Greater safety on street and highway can be achieved.

SOVIET LINENS THREATEN U. S. INDUSTRY

Are you BUYING AMERICAN? Those purchases you made today—did you inquire first as to whether they were the products of American firms and American workmen?

The response to the BUY AMERICAN drive, now being conducted by the Boston Evening American, has been city-wide, but it must affect the buying impulses of every consumer before the goal is reached.

Businessmen, merchants, civic leaders, State officials, all have joined in supporting the campaign.

Read today how one concern which has done business within this state for ninety years found its market threatened by cheap importations from Russia.

WAGES THREATENED

"I heartily endorse your BUY AMERICAN campaign.

"In the case of linen manufacturing, cheap Russian imports have raised havoc in the local market.

"Soviet exporters need not consider cost under their system.

"As a result there is very severe competition which is a real threat to the wage-scale now being paid American linen workers.

"There are 1200-1500 workers employed in our factory.

"How strongly our concern feels on the subject of buying home products is borne out by the labels which are affixed to every case which leaves our factory:

"BUY AMERICAN GOODS."

LABOR IN WARNING

Meanwhile, in the last bulletin of the Boston Central Labor Union appeared a ringing plea for American-made goods.

The article, reprinted from the American Federationist, said in part:

"One way to contribute to American prosperity is to see to it that you buy American-made goods wherever possible.

"Usually this can be done without sacrificing quality or beauty.

"There may be a tradition that an imported article is more desirable than a domestic product, but investigation often shows that this tradition grew out of the desire of salesmen.

"Wage-earners will follow a policy of intelligent self-interest if they make a special effort to buy American-made goods and thus do their share toward keeping our factories busy."

WARBURG FEARS DICTATORSHIP

Chicago, Jan. 15 (INS)—The 1936 presidential election may sound the doom or signalize a rebirth of Democracy in the United States and throughout the world, James P. Warburg, New York banker told the Chicago Association of Commerce today in a slashing attack on the Roosevelt administration.

The United States, Warburg said, is the world's outstanding example of constitutional Democracy.

"But," he added, "since March of 1933 the case of the United States has become extremely doubtful.

"It seems clear that in spite of his extraordinary agility, Mr. Roosevelt cannot now pose and be re-elected as the champion of the Democratic principle.

Missing Bay State Student Sought

Wayne, Pa., Jan. 15 (INS)—Police were asked to search today for two students of the Valley Forge Military Academy who left their uniforms in dormitory rooms here and disappeared.

Academy authorities said the youths, William H. Simpkins, 15, of Ocean City, N. J., and Robert L. Woodward, 19, of Lexington, Mass., may have decided to hitch-hike south for an impromptu vacation. Members of socially prominent families, the boys were said to have told companions they intended to spend the winter in Florida.

'Mary Costa' Plans To Start Life Anew

A meeting of relatives and friends, in which the complete history of the sad affair was talked over, prompted her to make this decision.

Mary has decided to start life all over again and said that she will seek work away from the sad memories of "Baby Dennis," who was abandoned last November in a Back Bay hallway and later died.

DEMOCRATIC LEADER DIES IN BRIGHTON

"Ceiling Zero" Contest Easy

Every air-minded boy and girl in New England can compete in the "Ceiling Zero" contest for Junior Birdmen and they stand just as good a chance as the members of winning one of the cash prizes or a pair of tickets to see the Copley Theater's melodrama.

All they need do is join the Birdmen by sending a dime along with their name, age and full address for their gold wings and membership materials. They can send their entries in the "Ceiling Zero" contest at the same time.

The best answers to "What Does Ceiling Zero Mean to Me?" are rewarded each week with the following prizes: First, $10 in cash; second, $5; third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh, $2, and next ten a pair of tickets each for the Copley Theater.

Get in this contest NOW. It's simple and easy and YOU may be one of the 17 winners. Here are the rules:

Write not more than 50 words on "What Does Ceiling Zero Mean to Me?" Write, print or typewrite your answer plainly on one side of the paper only. Put your name and full address in the upper left hand corner. Neatness will count.

Entries close Thursday noon of each week. Winners of cash prizes may not try again. Winners of tickets may try again for cash prizes.

Send all entries to Junior Birdmen, 100 Summer street, Boston. No entries will be returned and judges' decision is final. Non-members may compete by sending their membership applications and a dime with their entry to wing headquarters.

PARKER CALLS COURTHOUSE 'DISGRACE'

Suffolk County courthouse was branded a "disgrace to Boston and the State," by former Attorney-General Herbert Parker today as he expressed astonishment at the announcement by Mayor Mansfield that the contemplated $1,800,000 courthouse reconstruction program had been abandoned.

Mayor Mansfield placed the blame for the delay upon Governor Curley. "Apparently the only thing that is holding up the project is Governor Curley's inability to get the money, which he says President Roosevelt has promised him," said the mayor.

The Mayor's statement was in answer to Gov. Curley's statement of yesterday: "I have more confidence in word of the President than that of Mayor Mansfield."

Former Attorney-General Parker, member of a committee of the Boston Bar Association which has been fighting for years for a new courthouse, declared he had been assured by representatives of Massachusetts in Washington that the funds for the rebuilding of the courthouse were available.

Discussing the necessity of remodeling the present courthouse former Attorney-General Parker said:

"Conditions at the court house are growing worse from day to day, and until a new court house is built things are going to continue to grow worse. The new court house is an absolute necessity."

Democrats Lose 2 Votes in House

With the death today of Representative Leo M. Birmingham of Brighton and the resignation yesterday of Representative Ignatius B. Cleary of Wahan, the Democratic margin of leadership in the House decreased to 13 votes.

It was doubtful today, however, that Speaker Leverett Saltonstall would call for special elections to fill the vacancies. It was pointed out that this was the last session for both and newly elected members would have but a short time to serve.

Vicar Improves After Operation

Rt. Rev. Joseph A. Delaney, vicar-general of the Roman Catholic diocese of Albany, N. Y., who underwent an extremely serious operation at the New England Baptist Hospital, was reported "considerably better" today.

Although he is not yet out of danger, Dr. Frank H. Lahey, head of the Lahey Clinic, who performed the operation, stated that Monsignor Delaney's condition is definitely improved.

Palmer Pleads Guilty of Threats

New York, Jan. 15 (AP)—Austin Phelps Palmer, retired engineer, indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of sending threatening letters to President Roosevelt, pleaded guilty in federal district court today.

He will be sentenced January 24.

You, too, Can Avoid Baldness

If you become bald, you do so by choice. Baldness is not thrust upon you. It warns you of its approach — you have dandruff; your scalp itches; your hair falls abnormally. You douse your scalp with cure-all concoctions and try hit-or-miss treatments—and almost before you know it your scalp is ready to join a nudist colony.

Choose hair — not baldness. More than a quarter-million other men have found that hair can be retained or regained by the reliable proved Thomas method. Thomas can help you to get rid of your dandruff; stop falling hair; and re-grow hair on the thin and bald spots.

Consult a Thomas expert today. He will examine your scalp without charge or obligation, and tell you frankly just what can be done in your particular case. He knows the symptoms of the 14 local causes of baldness and knows exactly how to overcome them. Remember — scalp examination is free.

BOSTON LEADS IN HIGH COST

Boston's per capita cost of government for 13 years, including 1934, was higher than that of any large American city according to a statement issued today by Boston Municipal Research Bureau.

The statement says a study made by the bureau "indicates lavish local government expenditures."

According to the Bureau Boston's per capita cost of general city departments from 1921 to 1934, inclusive was $74.05. Others were Buffalo, $71.82; New York, $71.34; Milwaukee, $61.46; Los Angeles, $54.01; San Francisco, $51.12; Pittsburgh, $49.39; Cleveland, $46.82; Detroit, $43.28; Baltimore, $41.86; Philadelphia, $39.31; St. Louis, $37.49 and Chicago, $36.02.

The Bureau stated that in 1935 Boston's adjusted tax rate exceeded the average in the other cities by 51 per cent.

ODORS DRAW PROTEST

Mr. Fixit Gets Subway Complaint

By MR. FIXIT

This department has been installed as a public service for Boston Evening American readers. It will endeavor to solve problems and fix troubles dealing with city, state or public utility service. Requests must be specific and brief. No anonymous requests nor matters of a purely private nature can be considered.

B. G. C., Dartmouth street, Boston, writes:

"As a general rule people don't talk of or write of odors. They either ignore them or act indifferently.

"Yet I can't help but voice my disgust with the odor that greets the commuter on the stairway connecting Scollay lower and Scollay upper stations.

"Maybe this condition exists because the proper B officials know nothing of it, though I can't understand how anyone can miss the smell. The odor can't be described, it is just nauseating.

"The judicious use of a spray would easily adjust le condition.

Can you bring it to the attention of the proper parties?"

"Mr. Fixit" will look into the matter and see if it can be adjusted.

• • •

N. R. C., Broadway, Everett: The information you have requested will reach you by the end of the week.

• • •

"Silent," Boston:

If you want "Mr. Fixit" to try to do anything for you, you must send name and address. No confidence will be broken.

"Mr. Fixit" must have your name and address for record and for investigation.

TWO BAY STATE FIRMS ATTACK WAGNER ACT

The Wagner National Labor Relations Law was attacked as unconstitutional by two Massachusetts concerns in the United States district court here today.

The right of these companies to make wage and hour contracts with company unions is impaired by the law, it was asserted.

The companies are the A. C. Lawrence Leather Co. of Peabody, which employs 2000, and the Lion Shoe Company, employing 125 in Lynn. Some city of Congressman William P. Connery, Jr., co-author of the legislation.

A temporary injunction restraining the National Labor Relations Board from interfering with the two concerns was granted by Judge Elisha H. Brewster.

The request for a permanent injunction will be heard by Judge Brewster next Monday at 2 p. m.

Petitions for an injunction were filed by Attorney Bartholomew J. Brickley of Boston.

The respondents are Patrick A. Donoghue, regional director, and J. Warren Madden, J. W. Carmody and Edwin S. Smith, members of the national board.

The concerns allege Congress exceeded its powers in enacting the law, as it assumed control over intrastate commerce.

They also allege the law seeks to regulate and, in effect, impair and destroy the right of freedom of contract both as to employes and employers.

This, it is asserted, is a deprivation of liberty and property without due process of law, contrary to the guarantees embodied in the Constitution.

Jean Dixon Wed To Edward Ely

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Hollywood, Jan. 15 (US)—The first Yuma marriage on record to be kept a secret from inquisitive Hollywood is that of Jean Dixon, well-known stage and screen actress, and Edward Ely of Boston.

Miss Dixon and Ely motored to the Arizona Gretna Green January 3, where the knot was tied by "Marrying Judge" Freeman.

The bride and groom went directly to Victorville for their honeymoon, keeping their marriage a profound secret from all but a few close friends.

When this writer questioned Miss Dixon she readily admitted that she was Mrs. Ely, but said that she and her bridegroom had hoped to keep their elopement a secret for a few more weeks.

A friend of many years' standing, Ely had come out here to visit her during the holidays and decided to remain in California. Since distance was no longer an obstacle in the path of their romance, their trip to Yuma and subsequent marriage followed a few days after New Year's.

Ely Relatives Here Surprised at Bridal

Relatives of Edward Stevenson Ely of 12 Brimmer street, Beacon Hill, were surprised when they learned of his secret marriage to Jean Dixon, motion picture star. They were informed by Ely in a telegram two days ago of the marriage.

Ely's relatives have known Miss Dixon for several years and have entertained her in Boston.

Ely is 37 years of age and moves in the best of social circles. He was formerly a member of the cast of Frost and Ely. For the past three years he has done little work because of illness. He has done many decorative settings for amateur shows including productions staged by the exclusive "Hasty Pudding" club of Harvard.

In addition to theatrical scenery, Ely has done a number of portraits. He graduated from Boston Museum of Fine Arts school and attended Sylvester George Art School.

When he flew west shortly before Christmas he planned to return to Boston within a short time but his friends expect his sudden marriage may alter his plans.

Alice O'Leary Quits Boston Radio Realm

By N. F. T.

No more Alice O'Leary singing on Yankee Network lanes.

It's to be Alice in WLW land henceforth, the local songbird having just taken leave for the city of Cincinnati.

Loudspeaker patrons in these parts will miss Alice. Her hard-earned place as a prominent one in the Hub broadcasting scheme of things. Under the new arrangement, with the powerful WLW waves wafting her voice, carrying it into New York and throughout the Middle West, bigger and better things seem in store, all of which breaks up the popular Alice O'Leary-Adrian O'Brien duet, at least for the time being. There are those who allow the station may be hitting the trail in that direction himself, ere long. Meanwhile, the Ohio dialers good luck becomes no less than our talent loss and, with due respect to more than a few air artists in these thickets, the Boston talent ranks can't exactly spare many personalities of the O'Leary calibre. Her career from this point will be watched with added interest.

" N. F. T."

POLICE PROWESS

Another well known New England figure, General Daniel Needham, former Massachusetts state police head man, moves in behind a "mike" for coast-to-coast telling of the Millen-Fabe capture, and tonight's the night (WAAB) at 10 o'clock. It's the new "Gang Busters" series, starring Phillips Lord, with distinguished law enforcement officials relating how war on crime is waged.

• • •

"Dreams of Long Ago," a composition by the late Enrico Caruso, will be a highlight of the program offered by John Charles Thomas, the distinguished American baritone (WBZ), when he holds forth this evening at 10 p. m. A variety of operatic, semi-classic and concert selections complete Thomas' program.

• • •

MICROPHONE MIRROR

Fred Allen and Portland Hoffa will have an opportunity to hear an impression of themselves on their own studio stamping ground (WEEI), tonight at 9 p. m. David Zaritsky, a Brooklyn College student, and Betty Douglas, also from the same school, plan to offer their impersonation of Fred and Portland on the weekly amateur contest. Peter Van Steeden, completely recovered from his recent appendectomy, is again musical director for "Town Hall Tonight."

• • •

Irene Beasley, contralto, has been signed as a permanent feminine singing star of the "Musical Rendezvous" program starring Phil Duey and Clyde Lucas' Orchestra, beginning with tonight's half-hour (WNAC), at 8 p. m. Charlie Leland, West Coast comedian, has also been signed as a permanent feature on this series.

Best Bets Tonight

6:30 p. m.—WNAC—Address by Governor James M. Curley, on "Social Security."

8:00 p. m.—WNAC—"Cavalcade of America," broadcast to dramatize the progress in building and architecture.

9:00 p. m.—WEEI—Fred Allen and Portland Hoffa to hear themselves as other hear them when two young amateurs impersonate them tonight.

9:30 p. m.—WBZ—20,000 Years in Sing Sing with Warden Lewis E. Lawes.

G.O.P. Press Chief Aids Landon Drive

Topeka, Kans., Jan. 15 (AP)—Charles F. Scott, director of publicity in the Republican presidential campaigns of 1912 and 1932, will aid Governor Alf M. Landon in handling mail referring to his possible selection as the 1936 G. O. P. ticket head.

Scott, editor of the Iola, Kans., Daily Register, has opened headquarters here for an indefinite period.

Police Work May Save Vet's Life

With a Chinese laundry mark as his only clue, Police Sergeant John P. McPherson did detective work that may save the life of a 47-year-old war veteran who collapsed Sunday night in Pemberton square.

At City Hospital it was decided only a delicate brain operation could save the unconscious and unidentified victim. Consent of relatives was necessary.

McPherson made a round of Greater Boston laundries and today in Watertown established the identity of the man as Thomas Manning, 48, of Seymour street, Roslindale.

Kelly Resigns City Post

John J. Kelly, disabled World War veteran, today retired from service as chief clerk of the municipal employment bureau. He had held that post for 14 years. Kelly will be succeeded by John H. Wallace of Dorchester, another disabled veteran.

LANDON WINS OKLAHOMA BACKING

Oklahoma City, Okla., Jan. 15 (US)—Oklahoma's 19 delegates to the Cleveland Republican convention will be for Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas, for the presidential nomination.

This was the consensus of high party men here today following the state roundup Monday of Young Republicans and Colonel Theodore Roosevelt's stirring speech.

Despite the fact that Knox-for-the-President clubs have been organized in many sections of the state, there is no ground well for the Chicago publisher so far as they could observe, they said. The rank and file pretty generally, in their judgment, will go down the line for Landon.

There is some sentiment for Borah in the larger cities because of the Supreme Court issue that is likely forging to the front in dramatic fashion, but it is not organized.

Magnanimity displayed by Landon friends in the Young Republican convention has left a good impression. A Landon resolution could have been carried by a three to one vote but Colonel Short's friends asked that it not be attempted. A couple of Borah's supporters also opposed such action at this time.

San Francisco, Jan. 15 (US)—Nevada joined with sister states in the nation's call t. Governor Landon of Kansas as the Republican nominee for President when the Landon Republican League of Nevada was declared established today at Reno.

It will function under direction of William F. Gilcsesman, a leading businessman of that city.

Announcing his support of the Kansas executive, Gilcsesman said: "The time has arrived for America to assert its independence of the bureaucracy which has been built up by the Washington government, which has usurped the rights of the people in its orgy of waste and extravagance with public funds."

Fore River Span Opening Delayed

Last minute construction was given as the cause for the postponement until February 1 of the opening of the Fore River Bridge, connecting Quincy and Weymouth. The bridge was to have been opened today.

   185 Prizes . . . . . Total $3000.00
3. The contest is open to everybody—men, women, boys and girls—except employes of the Boston American, theatres and motion picture companies listed in this contest, and their families. It does not matter where you live. It costs nothing to play this game.
4. The composite pictures must be cut out, assembled and pasted or pinned together. Below each picture must be written the name of the movie star.
5. In all, 185 pictures will be printed—three every week-day for six weeks. Pictures are to be submitted only in a complete group of 185. Send the pictures until you have the 185. Then send them to Movie Faces Editor, Boston American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass. P. O. Box 1059. Be sure to write your name and address clearly on your entry. All pictures must be in Boston American office by midnight 6 days after the last set is published. We cannot undertake to return any entries.
6. Each entry should be sent by first class mail—postage prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the post office department. Contestants may send in as many sets as they wish but no contestant shall be entitled to more than one prize.
7. Accuracy will count. Neatness will count. No elaborate sets are necessary. Simplicity is best.
8. You need not purchase the Boston American to compete. You may copy or trace the pictures from the originals in the Boston American and assemble the pictures from the copies you have made. Copies of the Boston American may be obtained at Boston American offices or public libraries free of charge.
9. The judges will be a committee appointed by the Boston American. Their decisions will be final. In cases of ties duplicate award will be given each tying contestant.

All players will be selected from the following studios: 20th Century-Fox Films Corporation, Paramount Pictures Corporation and Warner Brothers Picture Corporation. The movie stars may be seen on the screen at the following M & P Theatres:

Betty Alden on 'Beacon Hill'

Play By Amateur Group Attracts Fashionable Audience

By BETTY ALDEN

THE DELICATE SATIRE and infectious humor, to say nothing of the melodious tunes of Gilbert and Sullivan, are always refreshing to Mr. and Mrs. General Public, and last evening a large audience chuckled with delight at the gentle burlesquing of public officials and customs and manners in "Utopia Ltd.," one of the lesser known operettas . . .

The production was produced by the Apthorp Players, who are affiliated with the dramatic group of Christ Church, Cambridge, and who are achieving quite a bit of fame among amateur theatrical groups for their notable successes this season . . . Their play last evening was presented in the Parish House of Christ Church and the committee was announcing s. r. o. to late comers as the curtain went up . . .

NANCY FAXON

One of the leading characters in the operetta was Nancy Faxon, who as a radio deb several seasons ago, and a blues singer at charity parties last year, won the envy and acclaim of all her friends . . . She acquitted herself very well in the part of a well-bred and polished little English girl, though we are accustomed to hearing her croon and missed the low throaty notes with which she puts over a blues song . . .

Her mother, Mrs. Huntington Faxon, was in the audience, wearing a floating chiffon gown of salmon pink with full bishop sleeves and brilliant clips down the front . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Peabody of Cambridge were other ardent Gilbert and Sullivan enthusiasts who enjoyed the performance. Mrs. Peabody was gowned in black velvet with a sable wrap . . . Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Dorr Viele, Rev. and Mrs. C. Leslie Glenn, Mrs. Ernest Dennen, who looked very distinguished in a gown of black chiffon and velvet with a wide white velvet scarf . . . Also Professor and Mrs. Joseph Beale of the Harvard Law School, Professor James Muller, Mr. and Mrs. Stoughton Bell, Mr. and Mrs. George Tucker and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Spencer . . . Admiral and Mrs. Paul B. Dungan proudly watched the performance of their daughter, Miss Catherine Dungan, who was a very sweet and appealing leading lady . . .

A bevy of youthful parishioners of Christ Church sold candy and served as ushers, under the guidance of Mabel Aubrey, head usher . . . She wore a green dinner gown studded with gold and brilliants and among her assistants were Charlotte Stuart in black and gold metal cloth, Ann Mason Hodges, a post deb, whose Yale blue gown was beaded with tiny gold beads, Muriel Spencer, Polly Clark, Frances Edwards and June Christensen . . .

Women Organize to Help Drive

CIRCUMSTANCES ALTER ANY CASE and consequently no one will be greatly shocked when they learn that over one hundred prominent society women, both in town and in the suburbs, are setting aside their roles as conservative housewives and are temporarily becoming gold diggers . . .

There's quite a bit of gold to be dug . . . from one place and another . . . as Mr. Ripley L. Dana, general chairman of the special gifts committee of the Community Fund Campaign for Human Needs, has set a minimum amount of $3,750,000 . . . and the members of the women's committee are concentrating all their efforts to reach this goal . . .

Mrs. Harvey H. Bundy and Mrs. Bernard C. Weld, co-chairmen of the women's group, are the leaders in this recent movement to set aside personal interests and ties to concentrate for a while upon the welfare of the community as a whole . . . By virtue of being directors and trustees of many charitable organizations, both Mrs. Bundy and Mrs. Weld are well qualified to take the helm in guiding the other volunteers . . . Among the special agency interests of Mrs. Bundy are the Children's Aid Association (on which board Mr. Bundy also serves), and the Judge Baker Guidance Center . . .

Closely allied with these two leaders are several other outstanding members of the executive board of the women's group of the Community Federation . . . Among them are Mrs. J. Gardner Bradley of Wellesley and Arlington street; Mrs. Harry Liebman of the Hotel Somerset and Mrs. Alexander Whiteside.

• • •

Mrs. J. G. Bradley Aids Many Charities

IN ADDITION to many social engagements, and the maintenance of her two large residences, Mrs. Bradley has a great many irons in the fire when it comes to charitable affairs . . . At the moment her greatest enthusiasm is the Women's Educational and Industrial Union, one of the Community Federation agencies, of which she is a director . . .

Mrs. Liebman sponsored the Women's Crusade invaluably on both the honorary board and advisory committee . . . Her affiliations are legion, but it is perhaps safe to say that the closest to her heart is the Beth Israel Hospital of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies, another participating member of the Federation . . . She is a director of the hospital and also of the Sunnyside Day Nursery . . .

THE NAME OF THE DANCE should be enough warning, but gentlemen are advised not to wear top hats to the Snow Ball at the Towne Club on January 28, for that type of headgear will make an ideal target for the white cotton spheres with which the guests will be supplied. Here is Mrs. Allan V. Ellis, former Dorothy Porter, checking over the ammunition list at a committee meeting yesterday.

Society Notes

MR. AND MRS. DONALD CARTER STARR (Ethel R. Thayer) of Beacon street, gave a small dinner party at their home last evening. . . .

TWO POST DEBS and one of this season's debs, Priscilla Phelan, Jean Fuller and Mimi Little, have joined the committee working for the success of the Snow Ball which is to be given at the Towne Club for the benefit of the Boston Branch of the American Red Cross, on the evening of January 28. . . .

MRS. FREDERICK P. BAGLEY of Beacon street, is giving a large dinner at her home this evening in honor of Joseph Lee.

Lecturers At College Club

BEARS IN ALASKA and princesses in exile are two of the topics chosen by Mrs. John N. Eaton of West Newton for the January program of the College Club of Boston.

Frederick N. (Pete) Bodgett, well-known Boston sportsman, will discuss the bears in his lecture tomorrow evening, on his experiences as an aviator-hunter. Preceding his talk there will be a buffet supper for members and guests.

Mrs. H. M. Starr, who has lived in or near the families of most of her subjects, discussed "Princesses in Exile", this afternoon. Mrs. Starr spent several years collecting material for a biography she is now writing on Queen Sophie of Greece. Pouring after the lecture were Miss Cora Starr and Miss Ida R. Parker of Boston.

The speakers at the College Club this month have been Miss Eleanor P. Dunning a young Vassar graduate, who described bicycling and hiking expeditions in the British Isles; Miss Alice M. Maginnis of Brookline whose subject was 'New Acquisitions and Old Treasures in Our Museum'; and Mrs. Richard L. Cocley an authority on the manufacture and design of fine china.

Pourers on these occasions were Mrs. Forrest S. Emery of Brookline, Miss Elizabeth Towle of Marlboro street, Mrs. John L. Dearing of Cambridge, Miss Kate D. Griswold of Belmont, Mrs. Carl E. Pickhardt and Mrs. Edward V. Hickey of West Newton.

The ushers squad for this month includes, Mrs. Stephen S. Merrill of Arlington, Mrs. Robert H. Holt of Lexington, Mrs. John B. Crane and Miss Rosamond Clark of Boston, Mrs. Dickson N. Leavens of Cambridge and Miss Mary Lee Evans of Milton.

Bridge Party Saturday

An afternoon of cards and bridge is slated for alumnae of Sacred Heart Country Day School, Saturday afternoon at the school in Newton.

Mrs. Emlyn Mitchell, alumnae president, has appointed Betty Blake chairman of the affair, Jean Kiley, Alice Maginnis, Katherine McLaughlin, Mrs. William McCarthy and Marjorie Walsh are aiding with plans.

Selling chances at the affair for the benefit of the scholarship fund are Alice Hurley, Alice Fitzpatrick, Ellen Bottomley, Agnes Bourneuf, Helen Carlin, Helen and Miram Clarke, Mrs. Gerald Connelly and Mrs. James Walsh.

Patroness list includes Mrs. John T. Bottomley, Mrs. John C. Kiley, Mrs. Francis Broderick, Mrs. David Johnson, Mrs. James H. Carney, Mrs. M. Lester Madden, Mrs. Alfred Donovan, Mrs. John McLaughlin, Julia Prendergast, Mrs. Frank Stuart and Mrs. Frederick Quinn.

Others aiding the party are Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, Mrs. Matthew Fox, Mrs. Stephen Hallahan, Alice Falvey and Mrs. Josephine Haggerty.

Ace of Clubs Cast Entertained

A round of merry affairs has been tendered to members of the cast of "Rich Man-Poor Man," a farce which will be presented at the silver anniversary celebration of Ace of Clubs Monday evening at the Hotel Somerset.

Mrs. Henry Fitzpatrick and Gladys Carew were hostesses at rehearsals held recently at their homes. Alice Fitzpatrick is chairman of the evening and Mrs. Peter G. Fallon is coaching the production.

Cecilian Guild

Sewing Bee Aids Catholic Charitable Bureau

By MARGUERITE DOWNEY

SEWING BEES that turn into "settling bees" form the nucleus of Cecilian Guild's winter program. Club members gather every Tuesday morning at the League House . . . sew industriously on layettes for the Catholic Charitable bureau and settle a variety of problems from international politics to baby's feeding formula.

At yesterday's meeting, Mrs John G. Donehue presided . . . very attractive in a rust velveteen ensemble. Assisting her were Mrs William Arthur Reilly in peacock green crepe with heavy gold ornaments at the neckline and Mrs. Edward Kickham . . . her smart black frock banded with white braid.

Mrs. Henry Elliot Foley was busy at her task of bundling off tiny garments to worthy mothers and Mrs. Thomas Kelly of Jamaica Plain put in an equally energetic morning collecting dues.

Ambitiously running the sewing machine was Mrs. Frank Lane of Newton . . . deep fringe trimming her dark gown. Sitting in the corner sewing as rapidly as they talked were Mrs. Thomas J. Donellan in a colorful gown of orange wool. Mrs. Bernard Donehue . . . bright gold frock beneath her leopard swagger . . . and Mrs. John Keating in green knit . . . matching flowers topping her black turban.

Marion Lyons appeared in coral wool . . . Mrs. Joseph Leary wore a raspberry wool jacket with her dark skirt and Mrs. Walter Rooney's rose knit was trimmed with a tiny collar of angora.

Mrs. John J. Cremmen arrived somewhat late . . . very smart in a Russian styled coat of green wool collared in krimmer. A small band of matching fur trimmed her chapeau. Grace O'Donnell wore a gay print beneath her black cloth coat and sister Kay, Mrs. Edward Mahoney, came in tweeds and kid carsacut.

Next event on the calendar is the annual mid-winter lecture to be held in the near future. Final arrangements will be made at a tea Mrs. John G. Donehue is giving at her home for the club officers and the board on Tuesday afternoon.

Enjoying Miami's Sunshine

Vacationing in the South are Mrs. Edgar Arnand and her mother, Mrs. John E. Brown, who have taken a house at Miami for the remainder of the season.

Also bound for sunnier climes are Mrs. John Donohue of Lowell and her daughter, Grace, who depart shortly for a southern vacation. Mrs. Donohue is a well-known figure in League of Catholic Women and daughter Grace is achieving quite a reputation as a harpist.

Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Riley of Brookline, who have been wintering in Miami, are entertaining as their house guests, Maude and Thomas Greene, Jr., of Paris. Mrs. Riley, who before her marriage was Janet Burbank, was guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Shute of Lenox at luncheon at the Surf Club.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. McCarthy of Boston are spending the season in Honolulu, where they are guests at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel at Wakiki Beach.

St. Patrick's Alumnae Dance

CEILING ZERO

Thrilling Novel of the Air Mail

CEILING ZERO
Novelized by LEWIS ALLEN BROWNE
From the Stage and Screen Play by Frank Wead

(SYNOPSIS)

Tommy Thomas, air line hostess, and Tay Lawson, aviator, plan to be married some day. Tommy intends to get a pilot's license first. Jake Lee is division boss. Tex Clark and Dizzy Davis fly the mail for Jake. All three are pals and have been since their fighting days in France. The higher authorities, however, want to fire Dizzy. He is a notorious woman-chaser and is held to be a menace to the morale of the outfit. Dizzy falls hard for little Tommy and intends to sweep her off her feet, as he has done to so many other once good girls. Dizzy is scheduled to fly the mail out but he assures Tommy he can dodge it and he dates her for the next day.

CHAPTER XIV

"I'm crazy to have you teach me, Dizzy," Tommy admitted, "but I don't see how you can get out of doing what Mr. Lee orders you to do."

"You'll be amazed, and delighted, at what I can do, Tommy."

"I have to fill out some reports, they should have been in an hour ago."

"Go to it, beautiful. I'll be seein' you."

Dizzy sauntered out and back to Jake's office confident that his newest conquest would be the pretty little air line hostess. Tommy Thomas, respected and adored member of the division staff of employes.

"Hey you mugs—this is all wrong—we ought to celebrate. How about some chow and a couple snorts together — that Mama Gini's dump isn't so bad," Dizzy suggested.

"Good idea," Jake agreed, "I'll phone Mary to meet us there."

"Gee, I don know," Tex said, hesitating. "I promised Lou I'd be home for dinner."

"Come along for a couple drinks, anyway, Tex," Dizzy pleaded.

Tommy Accepts

"Excuse me one moment, gents," Dizzy cried, and hurried back to the other office where Tommy was completing a report.

"Occasionally."

"We're going over to Mama Gini's, Jake and Tex—Jake's wife is coming to meet us there. Come along with me, Tommy."

"I dont' know—"

"All right, Dizzy."

He crooked his arm. Tommy clung to it. They marched into Jake's office.

"All set, folks," he said, "dinner is about to be served!"

Jake and Tex stared at them in amazement. It was the same old Dizzy Davis. A girl bawle him out one moment, and goes to a wine and spaghetti joint with him the next!

Dizzy gave them an eloquent wink, as if to say, "Pipe, you guys —she's mine already."

Jake's wife was already at Mama Gini's when they arrived. She greeted them joyously, but looked rather questioningly at Tommy, amazed at Dizzy's fast work.

"This is gonna be a grand reunion," Dizzy said as they waited for the wine to be served. "Even you old married folks will get a kick out of it. How long you been married, Jake? I forget."

"Four years. Want to see my scars?"

"Five for me," Tex stated, "and don't get Lou wrong. She's grand, only she don't like Dizzy, she thinks he makes me drink."

"Dizzy's next. Perhaps that Birdie dame will—"

"Aw, skip it, will you, Jake?" Dizzy pleaded.

They began drinking a few toasts.

"Come on, Mary," Jake said.

"Gees, but they're crazy about each other," he said.

"You used to know her, didn't you?"

They Dance

"What do you say, Tommy?" Dizzy stood up.

Tommy got up and they began to dance. To Tommy's surprise, Dizzy was unusually good at dancing. After a while he asked:

"How'm I doin', Beautiful?"

"All right. A little close, that's all."

"Shucks, that's all I know—they taught me to dance close."

"Yes? That must have been back in the early gay nineties."

"Say? How old do you think I am?"

"Close to Methuselch."

"Listen, Tommy, I'm only 34."

Dizzy didn't do so badly, at that. He only deducted three years.

"That's plenty too much when you're only 30—Oh, Dizzy, that slipped. I'm supposed to be 31, on the office books."

"O. K. Now 34 is just the right age. When you are 34 I'll only be 49."

"What of it?" Tommy asked. "If you think, when I'm only 49, that I'm gonna dance with an old hag 34, you're crazy. So you better enjoy yourself while you can, Tommy."

"And what about Mister Dizzy Davis when I am 49? He will be 64!"

"Get this right—when you are 49 you'll be in the old ladies' home and I'll be out dancing with the newest crop of sub debs."

Dizzy Conquers

"Do you know, or doesn't it interest you, Tommy?"

"What?"

"You sure have a sweet-lookin' streamlined fuselage?"

"What's that?"

"Your chassis—it's beautiful!" He hugged her closer.

"Don't twist it out of shape, then."

"Hey, what's the idea of this, Dizzy?" Tommy asked.

He half forced her to sit. Then he sat beside her on the wall bench.

"I'll show you," he said, taking her in his arms. She started to push him away, then suddenly relaxed.

Dizzy leaned over and proceeded to kiss her. It was a long kiss, a kiss that made Tommy suddenly thrill. She responded to it.

Continued Tomorrow

Dizzy is certainly a fast and skilled worker at this game. Has pretty little Tommy fallen too hard for this flying Casanova?

Pink Swim Suits

A NEW color—coral pink—appears in the piles of white, turquoise and pale pink rubber bathing suits. And new weaves are as practical as they are good looking.

One is the herringbone stripe, lighter in weight and more pliable than last year's. Another is a lacy fabric-backed mallot. This last combines the non-absorbent figure-controlling qualities of rubber with the good-wearing attributes of fabric.

A Gay Deceiver

Both Youthful and Demure

By MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN 9646

It's a Gay Deceiver, this smart young frock which pretends to be a two-piecer.

It's an ideal type of frock to include in your wardrobe if you're trying to keep within a budget, and need clothes that can be worn again and again.

Remove the perky little peplum which buttons so snugly there at the waist, and even your best friend won't suspect it's the same dress.

There's something young and demure about a round yoke that is shaped up close to the throat —so smart, without a collar.

Complete, Diagrammed Marian Martin Sew Chart included.

Pattern 9646 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3⅞ yards 39-inch fabric.

Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern.

See how easily and thriftily you can make attractive clothes for yourself and family, and what lovely yet simple gifts you can make for Christmas.

Learn how you can choose and wear your clothes for greater charm! Price of book, 15 cents. Book and pattern together, 25 cents.

Health

Avoid Germs to Prevent Colds

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

AS AN old-time health official, I am always interested in efforts to control the common cold.

It is responsible for much lost time and misery.

This common ailment is spread by droplets of moisture shot into the air in coughing and sneezing. Millions of germs are showered on everything within reach. It stands to reason that the best way to prevent colds is to keep away from those who are infected and spreading the disease. Reading a book or paper, or using a pencil which may have been rained upon by the moisture from the nose and throat of a cougher or sneezer should be avoided.

Rigid rules of sanitation should prevail everywhere, but especially in buildings or offices used by large numbers of persons. First, all the sunshine possible should be admitted.

The shadows from drawn shades are favorable to prolonging the life of disease bacteria outside the body. In schools and offices a modern, efficient disinfectant should be added to the mop water.

AVOID SWEEPING

Dry sweeping and dusting should be avoided. Brooms and dusters extend the range of the poisons sent out by the original sneezes. Instead of dusting, the desks should be wiped off with a cloth wrung out frequently from water containing some worthwhile disinfectant.

All of the suggestions made in a recent bulletin stimulated this article are indeed excellent ones. If each of us followed them I am sure that colds would be much less prevalent than they are.

In addition, many of the serious complications of colds would be prevented. And you must not forget that the real danger of a common cold lies in the possibility of its developing into a chest cold or pneumonia.

To prevent colds it is necessary to avoid the germs. It is important to keep the skin in good condition, to wear proper clothing, and to eat nourishing food. Right temperature and ventilation in both working and living rooms are essential to good health and resistance to disease.

OTHER CAUSES

Despite all these precautions one may fall victim to a cold. This may be because germs are harbored in your teeth, nasal sinuses, tonsils or some other organ of the body.

Over-exertion, fatigue, lack of sleep or rest, and undernourishment may precipitate an infection, by reason of the lowered resistance they produce.

Sometimes repeated colds may be traced to a lack of vitamins in the diet. The diet of everybody should be well balanced and in order to be, it must include leafy vegetables, fruits, salads and at least a pint of milk every day.

Children should receive these foods, and besides a quart of milk daily. In addition, cod liver oil should be given the very young.

Avoid careless coughers and sneezers. If you have a cold go home and get to bed. Stay there until you have recovered. In this way you will protect yourself as well as others.

Approved By Fashion Congress!

IF THIS suit came straight from Bond street, it couldn't possibly be more elegantly tailored—or divinely British. It's a faithful copy of the smart single-breasted suit chosen by Princess Alice for her trousseau. In brown tweed—flecked with yellow—it is distinguished by the same details of expert workmanship found only in English custom-made clothes. Miss Caroline Oveson, society mannequin, wears with it a stunning brown tailored hat in the accepted mannish manner. The plaid steamer rug displayed by Miss Oveson is quite an innovation in rugs—especially of the steamer variety. It has a hoop through the top which in turn fits around the waist, holding the blanket firmly in place. Grand for promenading on a windy deck or for basking in the sun in a steamer chair. These are selections of the Fashion Congress of America and are labeled with the black and silver tags of approval awarded by the Congress. If you wish to know where to buy the suit and accessories, write or phone Miss Annice Brink, Fashion Editor of the Boston American, LIBerty 4000.

Refrigerator Rolls

2 cups boiling water
1-3 to ½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon salt
1-3 cup shortening
½ cup lukewarm water
1 tsp. sugar
2 yeast cakes
2 eggs
8 cups bread flour

Mix boiling water, sugar, salt and fat. Cool to lukewarm. Mix lukewarm water, sugar and yeast cakes. Combine mixtures; add eggs and beat with electric mixer. Add four cups flour and beat well. Add remaining flour by hand. Cover and store in refrigerator until ready to use. Cut off uniform pieces of dough and shape into long rolls. Place in greased bread pan and let rise about one hour, or until double in bulk. Place in upper part of oven.

Place all in electric oven. Set the timer to cook the dinner for 1¼ hours with temperature control set at 375 deg. F.

QUAINT cotton chints printed in small peasant designs appears here and there throughout the shops. Big picture hats, wide belts, high-heeled sandals and parasols also are made of this gay chints and show again the picturesque note. Jean King shows a printed set of headband, belt and bag. A huge white straw brim banded with the print ties over the headband to make a crownless shade hat.

THE wooden fob watch is one of the smartest innovations of the season, made with an attached braided leather thong and designed to be worn on the lapel of a tweed suit. The case is of polished wood, the dial black or dark brown with gold numerals, and the whole has a sporting air irresistible to the tailored woman.

Then there are clips used instead of buckles, to make belts adjustable, clips to hold collars in place, and clips to perform any number of practical duties.

THE NEWLYWEDS TELL OF THEIR FLORIDA FLIGHT

CHAPTER 548

LILLIAN GRASPED my hand and pulled me toward the dining room as if, I told myself whimsically, she were an old-fashioned mother dragging a youngster to the woodshed for a switching.

That she was much wrought up about Philip Veritzen's possible reaction to the surprise visit of Noel and Mary was patent, as was the fact that she had forgotten the injunction she had laid upon me to keep quiet.

I had no intention of reminding her of her inconsistency, however. I felt already as if I had been out of things for a year, at least, instead of two days, and I was pleasurably excited at this chance to gratify my curiosity and to engage in speculative conjecture as to what should be done concerning Philip Veritzen.

HAPPY YOUNGSTERS

Youthful voices raised in raillery and laughter floated out from the dining room, and when we came through the door and closed it behind us, we stopped involuntarily in admiration of our "bonny" young people, to borrow the expressive word Mrs. Barnes had used in discussing Marion.

"I'll challenge the world to produce six better looking youngsters," Lillian murmured in my ear, and I nodded an assent just as Junior looked around and startled at us with lively dismay in his eyes.

"Gee! Mums!" he said, "is the fifteen minutes up?"

"It can't be," Roderick contributed dolorously, and I had a sudden glimpse of how wide a gulf divides grownups from children. The horizons of Junior and Roderick were bounded by but one thing, the permission to stay up beyond their bedtime. They had no conception that any other problem existed.

"Not yet," I said cheerily, and looked at my watch.

"You have six minutes more," I told them, and pressed Lillian's arm significantly.

"Oh! All right," she muttered out of the side of her mouth, "I won't spill anything until they're out of the way."

"THEIR MAJESTIES"

"Make way for 'their majesties'!" Marion cried gaily, rising, as did all the rest of the merry group. "Put them next to the bride and groom!"

But Lillian with a quickly protesting gesture stopped the quick shifting of chairs which they were making.

"Keep your seats!" she said. "We're not going to stay very long. We just wanted to listen in on the broadcast. We'll just sit down here."

She paused with me at the chairs on the other side of the two small boys. Bob and Ronald were beside us before she had finished speaking, and drawing out the chairs, put us into them with elaborate courtesy. Noel had begun the forward rush with the rest, but the boys nearer us reached us first.

STORY OF THE FLIGHT

"Somebody switch off that station, quick!" Marion adjured. "We want 'their majesties' to listen to station MARY also NOEL."

"That's why we're here," Lillian said, smiling at her daughter, and Mary bent toward us, her lovely eyes shining.

"We were just telling them," she said, "that until yesterday we hadn't a thought of coming up—we'd given up Marion's birthday when Noel's father planned our extra Florida sojourn, because we didn't think it would be possible to get up here in time.

"Then, when we got down there, it seemed as if nobody thought of anything except flying here, there and thither, and we sort of got air conscious. We looked up schedules, found we could get to Newark tonight. We thought we'd have to take the milk train in the morning, or have you meet the train at Patchogue. But we happened to run across a chap who was flying to a private field near Riverhead, and he brought us down there, and then brought us in a car to where the gang met us. And not a soul the wiser until we landed here!"

Lillian nudged me, giving me one of our private signals, and I looked at my wrist watch.

"Oh! Gee!" Junior and Roderick exclaimed together.

Cooking by Radio Now A Reality

The radio stove, though still in the laboratory stage, cooks steak, potatoes and other meats and vegetables to a turn in less than five minutes instead of the half hour or so such cooking requires today.

Looking like an ordinary wood or coal range, the stove has uncanny powers, it is reported.

The circular plates over which the cooking is done remain cold. However, a pan of water placed on the plate will come to a racing boil in a few minutes.

There is no flame in its operation, no heated coil, no fire in any form, and the stove gives off no heat. Even cabbage cooked on it gives off no odor. Toast left until charred black doesn't taste in the least like burned toast.

The top of the radio stove is made of a non-metallic materosi, wood, wallboard, bakelite, or any similar substance that is hard and easily cleaned. Beneath each cooking plate a coil that picks up high-frequency radio waves that are set up, not by a far-away power station, but by an oscillator tube inside of the stove.

In other words, the stove generates its own radio waves—and the electric power for conversion to this purpose may be derived from the household lighting circuit.

The radio waves pass harmlessly through the top of the stove, or through any non-metalic object, into the cook pot. There they enter the food, encounter moisture, and become high-frequency currents, which cook the food from the inside out. That is, the heat is generated within the food and thus the food retains all its juices and flavor.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Love and Hatred Are Strangely Intermixed

WHEN WE are troubled, and don't know which way to turn—isn't it a comfort to talk it over with some one—get some one else's viewpoint?

Whether your problem is how to handle your best beau; how to make a stay-at-home-husband go places, or keep a gad-about one at home; what to do with your spare time, or how to budget the family income—Beatrice Fairfax will be happy to talk it over with you, and try to help you in her department of the Boston Evening American.

Beatrice Fairfax will pay $5 daily for the best letters, and a special prize of $5 goes for the BEST letter of the week. Mail YOUR letter today—it may bring you money as well as give you a new slant on matters that are troubling you.

If you wish a personal reply to your problems, be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

WE WERE engaged for two years, and absolutely and devotedly in love. I don't know what got into me the other night after he had left.

I think I must have jumped the rails and gone dotty. He hadn't done anything to make me angry, yet this fury got possession of me.

I wrote and told him I never wanted to see him again, and that I would send back his presents.

I stayed up all night fastening up his gifts, and returned them by a special messenger next morning. No sooner had they gone than my mood changed, and I felt bereft! I wanted him back.

I stayed around all day thinking he would come, but he did not. Several days later I got a letter saying he was glad I had been frank with him and told him how I felt. And he wished me all happiness and success.

I have tried in every way to get him back, but it's useless; he won't come. What could have been the matter with me? I am so UNHAPPY.

Love and hatred are curiously intermingled, and your spasm of hate the other night seems to have been one of those unaccountable things that we do sometimes, and for which we have no explanation to offer.

If your former fiance declines to be reconciled after your outburst, I'm afraid there is nothing to do about it. He probably visualized years to come, in which you would be subject to sudden and unreasonable anger, leave home and do other irresponsible things.

This is the time of the year when people forgive and forget. Suppose you try once more, sending him a truly penitent letter.

HE'S HARD TO PLEASE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I've gone with a number of girls, but don't seem able to select one as my wife. The first girl I fell for was too extravagant —I just couldn't afford that young lady.

The next one wore too much makeup. Not that I object to a little, but I don't like to go around with a girl who looks like a comic supplement.

I then went "steady" with a nice girl, but one night I saw her at the movies with someone else, so I broke with her.

The girl I'm going with now pooh-poohs the idea of giving up other men friends for me; says I'm jealous, and declines to become engaged. So I'm dropping her.

I know another girl who is very nice and quiet. But she hasn't any cash or style, and when you take her you feel as if you were doing an act of charity. I'd like to settle down and marry, but I don't seem able to find the right girl. PARTICULAR.

Your signature is well chosen, my dear young friend. If you were not actually engaged to the young women with whom you went steadily, there is no reason why they should give up other young men friends for you.

To find a girl with dash and style, who is not extravagant and will give up her other friends for you before you commit yourself, is an almost impossible combination. Be less like your grandfather. Girls used to come like that, but they don't any more.

That will answer several other young men who have written along the same lines.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I can't remember the time when my girl friend and I haven't been chums. We played dolls together, went through grade and high schools together and were graduated in the same class.

She was at my house the other night when my boy friend called up on the phone, and she said: "I can't see why you waste so much time with that pest."

This hurt me very much, as I hope to become engaged to this boy. I heard she tried to get him last summer while I was away, and failed. He thinks she's a peach too. What do you think of this case? "MARILYNN"

If she thinks he's a pest, and he thinks the same about her, doesn't that make them about equal? If you marry this boy, you will probably have to see less of your girl friend. But very often young people change in their likes and dislikes. Don't take this "pest" business too seriously.

WHEN SHOULD SHE GET HOME?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Will you please tell me what time a girl of 17 of unblemished character should get home at night to maintain her respectable name. I came home from a dance at 1:30 the other morning, and a disagreement has since taken place between my father and me. I have been invited to another dance at a friend's house, and I want with the full consent of my mother. ELEVEN

There's no fixed rule about the time a respectable girl should get home. If she is living at home with her parents, very properly they should decide that. And these days, it is not unusual for a party to last till 1 30, or even later. Let the neighbors chatter. You went with your mother's consent.

When BOLDNESS Is REWARDED

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Fortune favors the brave in Bridge as well as in life.

When perfectly sure that a certain line of play offers the best chance of attaining one's end, whether it be making a contract as declarer or defeating a contract as defender, one should disregard possible overtricks and stake everything on the supposition that key cards will be located as desired.

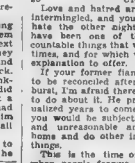
East, Dealer.

East-West vulnerable; North-South part-score 20.



The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Double
1 ♠	3 ♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

West, recognizing his partner's spade bid as a weakness bid over a takeout-double, saw little chance of defeating the contract unless he could obtain spade ruffs. Hoping to find two entries in East's hand, he opened a low club. Dummy put up the King and East won with the Ace.

West's failure to lead a spade did not entirely convince his partner that he had none; but he, also, saw nothing better to play for, and the spade return was made and ruffed by West. At this point West really had some choice.

If declarer intended to finesse for the thing of trumps, West could afford to cash the high diamond and a high club and sit back and wait. But declarer was a very astute player who would be sure to take proper cognizance of the ruff with the ten-spot.

He must be most unlikely to read West for one trump and no spades in the light of West's failure to rebid. The best chance of making the King consisted in finding another entry into the East hand.

Accordingly, West led another low club, hoping against hope that East had the ten. If East was surprised to find his ten holding the trick, he mastered it in time to return a spade for a second ruff. West hastily cashed the Ace of diamonds, thus defeating the contract.

Banish Double Chin

By Arline Gould

A FIRM, youthful neck used to be a gift that only nature could bestow, and if nature got a little insensible or calloused—due to a procession of too many birthdays—there was very little one could do by way of self-help.

Today, however, we can perform veritable tricks of magic, not only on chins and necks, but cheeks and relaxed muscles as well.

An amazing chin strap—made of the finest brocade and interlined with astringent herbs which aid in invigorating and restoring flaccid muscles—is a new item that has caught our editorial fancy.

* * *

This extraordinary affair is "tailored" (yes, we mean it) to fit the cheeks and chin. It corrects and prevents the deep downward lines from nose to mouth and sagging under the chin.

* * *

One of the nicest things about this chin strap is that it doesn't belong to the variety which has to be left on overnight. Fifteen minutes a day is all that is required of this affair.

* * *

Naturally it has to be adjusted tightly and worn for this length of time, but there is no necessity of going to bed all strapped up or frightening the children or causing your husband to go half out of his mind.

* * *

Its use is really a life-saver to any woman past 30 or to anyone recovering from an illness where strain and worry have left their marks. It holds every muscle of the lower part of the face and neck so firmly in position that muscles by themselves gradually return to normal.

* * *

The astringent herbs do their share also in coaxing back a youthful contour. It's the only affair of its kind that you will find in this country—or any other—and if it doesn't aid in firming and moulding the contour, then we don't know a real discovery when we see one.

* * *

To learn the name of this chin strap de luxe, which is interlined with astringent herbs and which need only be worn for 15 minutes a day, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Beauty ANSWERS

Question: I have a two-year-old daughter. She has the loveliest complexion and hair I have ever seen. However, recently I noticed that her hair is beginning to darken a bit. It is a lovely natural blonde—wavy and thick—and it breaks my heart to think of it turning brown. Please tell me of a harmless rinse I can use on her hair.
MRS. D. F. S., Medford.

Answer: I believe it is a great mistake to bleach or color a child's hair. All young hair is appealing and lovely, no matter what the color may be. When a child's hair begins to turn dark nothing will keep it from doing so. So, please give up the idea of bleaching it. Keep it well brushed instead, shampoo it frequently, and it will be really lovely. Another thing, the skin is always more beautiful when the hair is left its own natural color.

TRY SUZANNE'S MYSTIFYING TRICK

SUZANNE pulled a really smooth one the other evening, when Bess said she didn't believe in mind-reading.

"I'll read your mind!" Suzanne chuckled. "Let's see, this is the year 1936.

"I'll tear up this piece of paper into slips, and write all the numbers of the next ten years, '37, '38, '39, and so on, up to 1946. I'll write one number on each slip, fold it, and put all of them on this pan."

"Now choose one, Bess, and the number will tell the year when the last of us here will be married. I'm not saying who will be the last one! Don't tell me the number, but go into a huddle and show it to all the others. I'll guess by reading your mind!"

As soon as the fire died down, she rubbed the ashes with her finger on to her left forearm, and out popped the number 43, right on her skin.

"Why, it IS the one I drew!" exclaimed Bess. "You tricky little thing! How did you do it?"

Suzanne would only giggle and insist she had read Bess' mind, but here's her secret.

She planned to spring the trick at the party, so she had written the number 43 in soap on her arm. When she scribbled on the slips, she wrote 43 on each of them! Then, no matter which was chosen, it would read 43. And the pile of ashes could never give her away.

Can We Tell the Truth

By Winifred Black

The mother is worried to death about her little girl. No, the child's not ill, or at least she doesn't seem to be ill. She eats well, sleeps well and she has plenty of exercise. But oh! Such a lot of attention!

Poor child! She seems to live on attention. If you try to talk to her mother for one minute and don't say something about her, she will twist her mother's dress and whisper, or she will manage to knock over a chair or stumble over somebody's toes and say, "I beg your pardon." Then, of course, every one has to look at her and say:

"Isn't she polite, and what a pretty voice she has, and did you notice her eyes then?"

This was all very well when the little girl was little, She was loving, generous and light-hearted, but all at once she has turned into a mean, bossy, disagreeable little creature that nobody could bear to have around.

The poor mother doesn't know what on earth to do about it.

"I don't see what's the matter with her," said the mother the other day. "She makes fun of everybody. She mimics people right to their faces. She never enters into the games other children are playing. She acts as if she thought the whole world hated her. What on earth can I do to bring her to her senses?"

"She has come to her senses," said I, "at least so far that she knows that everybody dislikes her. Now, if you could only bring her to understand why they dislike her maybe she'll have sense enough to behave herself. I don't blame the child. I blame you. You've petted her, spoiled her and made her vain, jealous and overbearing, and it's your fault. Not hers."

"SPARE THE ROD—"

"You've let it go so far now that I wonder if you can do anything about it yourself. Maybe you'd best send her away to school, where the discipline is strict. Or, perhaps, if you can just turn her loose among her schoolmates, they will do the work. If you don't do something, the poor child's life is going to be a perfect misery to her as long as she lives."

This is what I wanted to say and what I ought to have said. Did I say it? I did not. I just smiled feebly and said:

"Oh, she is just going through a phase. She'll outgrow it. Don't worry. The other youngsters will make her come to."

What a coward I was, wasn't I? What would you have done about it, honestly, now, just between you and me and the uncompromising gate-post?

Fashion Flashes

It is a pinkish wine tone, and it is shown in blouses for wear with new spring suits, as well as in matching accessories such as scarfs, gloves and hats.

* * *

BLOUSES are more important than ever, what with the suit parade already starting, and the most popular style this season will be the tailored shirt in silk crepes, satins, cotton jacquards and linens.

* * *

The tailored shirt will feature stitched triangle pockets, perfectly fitted collars, stud buttons, yokes and tucked bosoms. It is being shown in vivid colors such as bottle green, coral, heliotrope blue, citron green—and fiji.

* * *

FLANNEL waistcoats in race-track checks are new and gay for wear with spring suits. They have both breast and hip pockets and come in white, red or gray crosbars and will dress up your last year's suit until you'd never recognize it.

* * *

New Ways of Serving Old Favorites

FROM MARTHA LEE'S WEDNESDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WAAB

A grand gift and a practical one!

A sandwich toaster has many uses as a grill for bacon or chops, but its main use is for making easily and quickly, those fancy toasted sandwiches, all golden brown and oozing goodness.

Toasted sandwiches can be made under the broiler or on a skillet, but both these methods require turning and watching.

In preparing the sandwiches any one of a number of fillings can be placed between two slices of bread and the bread buttered on the outside (have melted butter and brush handy to do this quickly.)

This part may even be prepared ahead of time and the sandwiches popped into the grill when all the family and guest are assembled at the table. There are many fillings other than cheese if, as this writer said, the family is not keen about this food.

A thick cream sauce (3 tablespoons of flour to one cup of milk) may be used as a foundation and any food added—chopped mushrooms, crabmeat, chicken, lobster or vegetables.

Here are a few recipes tested by Good Housekeeping.

TOASTED APRICOT SANDWICHES

1 cup dried apricots
2 cups water
½ cup granulated sugar
12 slices white bread
Cinnamon
Melted butter

Boil the apricots, uncovered with the water and sugar for 10 minutes, then cover and simmer 15 minutes. Remove from heat and stir to a paste. Cool and spread on six slices of bread, sprinkle lightly with cinnamon and top with the remaining slices of bread. Brush with the melted butter and toast in sandwich toaster. Makes ½ cup filling and fills 6 full-sized sandwiches.

WALNUT AND HAM SANDWICHES

1 cup finely chopped cooked or canned ham
½ cup finely chopped walnut meats
1 tsp. prepared mustard
4 tbsps. cream
Salt
Pepper
Bread
Melted butter.

Mix the ham, walnut meats, mustard and cream. Add salt and pepper to taste. Spread between slices of bread. Brush with melted butter and toast in a sandwich toaster. Makes 1¼ cups filling and fills 10 full-sized sandwiches.

GIBLET AND EGG SANDWICHES

Giblets from 1 chicken
1 shelled hard-cooked egg
1 tbsp. cream or evaporated milk
1 tsp. minced onion
½ tsp. Worcestershire or similar sauce
1 tsp. catsup
½ tsp. salt
Bread
Melted butter

Clean and cook the giblets in boiling salted water until tender. Drain, put through the food chopper with hard-cooked egg. Then add the cream, onion, Worcestershire sauce, catsup and salt. Use as a filling between slices of bread. Spread with melted butter and toast in a sandwich toaster. Makes ¾ cup filling and fills six full-sized sandwiches.

A Cry for Caution

DEATH TAKES THE WHEEL!

(In the year just gone, there were 795 persons killed in automobile accidents in Massachusetts—668 adults and 127 children. Of the adult toll, 540 were men and 128 were women. But of all the appalling total, 473 VICTIMS WERE PEDESTRIANS. THERE WERE ONLY 292 DRIVERS AND RIDERS WHO DIED.)

By PAUL WHELTON

The motorist backed the car to the far end of the 10-story roof. He shifted into low, started back across the roof, moved into second and shot off the roof's edge.

Down, down the car toppled, turning over once in its drop and landing, nose first, on the pavement, with a crash that drove the engine back into the driver's lap and sprayed glass splinters all over the street.

BECAUSE IF TWO CARS GOING 30 MILES AN HOUR COLLIDE HEAD-ON, THE IMPACT IS EQUIVALENT TO DRIVING A CAR OFF THE ROOF OF A 10-STORY BUILDING.

SPEED!

"Few motorists who boast among their business associates that their car will do 70 miles an hour understand the terrific force with which they are playing," said Carl Goodwin of the Massachusetts Safety Council today.

Power of Gun

"A car going even 60 miles an hour has the same impact force that a projectile has after being fired from a six-inch, long-range gun.

"Even at 30 miles an hour, a car seldom survives an impact in collision, as true stories, taken from official records, show.

"On an October evening, a motorist parked his car on a Cape Cod highway with the lights on. He had been struck by a car half an hour before and he wanted to get out and check the damage.

"While he was standing in front of the machine, another motorist drove into the car from behind at high speed. The impact forced the parked car, with its brakes set, up an incline and into a tree 30 feet away.

"The car which had caused the collision went off the highway at an angle in the opposite direction and did not stop within 50 feet.

"In its flight, the parked car struck its owner a blow which resulted in his death.

"When the dust cleared away, there were two cars beside the road, folded up like accordions, one man dead and another critically injured.

"That is the force under a driver in a modern automobile, a force which is creating havoc everywhere when vigilance lapses even for an instant."

TRUCK OWNERS SIGN PLEDGE OF SAFETY

I DO NOT DRIVE TO INJURE

The Boston Evening American's emblem of Honor—I DO NOT DRIVE TO INJURE, is today being carried into every New England State.

Whipped by the keen desire to make the highways of this state and its neighboring territory safe for travel, thousands have rallied to the safety drive now being conducted by the Boston Evening American.

Hundreds of letters from individuals, some of them drivers of automobiles for the past decade and even longer without an accident of any kind, have asked for a sticker.

Have YOU?

EXPRESSMEN SIGN

The Hygrade Sylvania Corporation of Salem, manufacturer of Hygrade bulbs and Sylvania Radio Tubes, have enrolled 100 per cent, as has the P. B. Mutrie Transportation, Inc., with its fleet of 30 superstrucks and tanks.

Today, 215 regular drivers of the Railway Express Agency signed the Safe Driving Campaign of the Boston Evening American.

"Our entire group of regular drivers, 215 in number, signed the Safe Driving Campaign pledge to use the greatest possible care to avoid accidents throughout the coming year.

"It will interest you to know that we intend holding a number of meetings during 1936 to carry on this good work among our drivers as we believe firmly in your campaign

"If there is anything further we can do to assist we will be glad to do so."

PLAN PRIZES

The Boston Consolidated Gas Company, with 165 cars of all description, has joined the drive.

Not only has the campaign to date been instrumental in cutting down the large list of accidents,

Father Kills Two Daughters and Self

Macon, Ga., Jan. 15 (INS)—Albert Adams, 56, general agent of a life insurance company in Macon, shot and killed his two daughters, Helen, 7, and Emma, 13, police reported, and fatally wounded himself with a shotgun today. Adams died in a hospital at 9 a. m.

PIPER TO DIRECT PAROLE SURVEY

Charles B. Piper of the Harvard faculty was today named to direct the New England unit of the $140,000 survey of the country's parole systems which is being mapped out in Washington.

It is planned to study the lives of 10,000 released prisoners in the effort of parole protection, commutation, suspended sentences and other prison procedures.

Records of courts, prisons, probation and parole officers and secret agencies will be scrutinized to find out just what becomes of prisoners after they have left the institutions.

Professor Piper is a former magistrate and has long been a student of corrective administration.

Recently he has directed the unemployment census for the sociology department of Harvard.

Mayor Mansfield tomorrow will preside at exercises in commemoration of the 130th anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin. Pupils from the trade and mechanical schools of the city will join with the Mayor in observance of the day.

ROXBURY BOY, 3, KILLED BY TRUCK

He was the 18th in Greater Boston since the start of 1936.

Police, unable to find Dana on the books, wrote instead the name of Daniel Smith, 27, of Harvard street, Winthrop, as the driver.

According to witnesses Albert was playing with his brother, Bernard, and several other children near the building at 2164 Washington street, Roxbury, where the truck was making deliveries.

The first Smith knew of the accident police said, was when a passerby shouted to him to "pull ahead, quick."

They took the crushed form of the little boy to City Hospital but Death was not to be denied.

The child died within a few minutes.

THREATEN QUIZ AT TEWKSBURY

Investigation of the State Infirmary at Tewksbury by the legislative committee on public welfare was threatened today by Senator Joseph A. Lancona of North End.

Lancona, chairman of the committee, was speaking on a proposal to change the name of the infirmary to "State General Hospital."

"The last time we were up there there was four feet of water in those subways between the buildings," the senator said. "If that hasn't been fixed, or if the contractor hasn't planned to repair them, I'll go after them."

Following the hearing, Commissioner of Public Welfare Walter V. McCarthy and Commissioner of Mental Diseases Winfred Overholser sat in at an executive session of the welfare committee and it was voted to report the bill favorably.

3d Woman Maniac's Victim

As police scoured the city early today in search of the brutal attacker of Miss Ruth Condon of Dorchester, officers of the Roxbury Crossing station discovered a new victim of an apparent maniac.

The woman, Mrs. Elsie Whetlin, 31, estranged wife of a Cambridge man, was found unconscious in an alley off Kendall street, Roxbury.

Rushed to City Hospital she was found to be suffering from scalp lacerations, a fractured skull and knee abrasions. Her name has been placed on the danger list.

She then told officers she had been attacked and lapsed into a coma before they could question her further.

At City Hospital Miss Condon was reported as improving today from the effects of the vicious attack on her as she returned to her home in Mt. Vernon street Monday night.

A suspect identified by Mrs. Florence Ziegalbaum of Washington street, Dorchester, as the man who threatened her on the same night, has been practically eliminated from suspicion in the Condon attack, police said.

Police decided, however, to have Miss Condon view the suspect in a police lineup when her condition permits.

Meningitis Kills Fourth Prisoner

The epidemic of spinal meningitis at Bridgewater State Farm took its fourth life and struck down two more victims today.

Howard Tate, 35, of Middlesex street, Malden, died at Haines Memorial Hospital, to which he had been transferred.

Joseph Babkonis, 22, of Westfield, and William Pennant, 42, of Boston, were stricken with the disease and were removed to the Haines Hospital.

Low Enough

Pierre, S. D., Jan. 15 (AP)—The Secretary of State blinked when he saw the incorporation papers for the Homestead Corporation of Deadwood, a mining company capitalized at $500,000. Stock was listed as 50,000,000 shares—at one cent each.

GRANGE OFFERS 10-POINT FARM PROGRAM

Washington, Jan. 15 (AP)—The National Grange, dean or organized farm groups in America, submitted to the Senate Agricultural Committee today a 10 point program for a new national plan to replace AAA.

In the first definite break with administration plans to draft a bill retaining AAA principles along lines adopted by Secretary Wallace's farm conference last week, the grange asked Congress to provide:

1—Appropriation to provide for the completion of contracts entered into in good faith and partially carried out by American farmers.

2—A soil conservation program through wise rotation of crops and through a system of government rentals.

3. Speed up the retirement of sub-marginal lands.

4. Retain and expand the surplus commodity corporation to deal with agricultural surpluses.

5. Protect American markets for American farmers.

6—Provide an honest dollar, one just to debtors and creditor alike, and prevent uncontrolled inflation or deflation.

—Maintain ample rural credit facilities.

Ask Death Penalty In Escape Killings

Amendment to the law to provide the death penalty as punishment for prisoners who cause death in escape attempts was urged by Representative Roland D. Sawyer of Ware today before the legislative committee on judiciary.

"Desperate men, serving long sentences, do not fear a few more years added to their sentences," Sawyer told the committee. "We must hold the death house before such men if we care to deter them from killing in attempts to escape."

Robert J. Watt, secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor, today took issue with Commissioner of Education James G. Reardon over the latter's statement that reducing the compulsory school age from 16 to 14 years would mean an increase in teachers and add to the tax burden.

Watt asserted:

"All this twaddle about forcing families into public welfare if their 14-year-old children are kept in school is just the sort of smug supercilliousness which ought to make the unemployed fathers and mothers disgusted."

Tax on Inventories Opposed by Solons

Vigorous opposition to the recommendation of the special commission on taxation for shifting the tax on machinery to non-manufacturing corporations through the imposition of an inventory tax was voiced today at the continued hearing before the legislative committee on taxation by Norman McDonald, executive secretary of the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers Associations.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

An interesting reflection on the length of time for which radio has been not only a source of entertainment, but almost a necessity, strikes me on reading of the death of Roxy at the age of 52. Young as he was, brief as the time in which radio has meant anything to most of us, yet Roxy had already made important radio history.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

It is true, probably, that New York knew him better as the impresario of huge and elaborate film theaters with the musical and choreographic preludes and presentations for which he was so famous. But to the country at large he was the soft and friendly voice that every Sunday afternoon for so many seasons allowed us to hear his stage music and his specialty acts, and then, from his studio, introduced us to his proteges, in whom he had such confidence and who under his auspices became so well known.

Names of "Wee Willie" and "Gamby" Still Linger

The only Roxy artists whose names I remember over a decade are "We Willie," of whom I have lost track entirely, and Gamby, the dancer, Miss Gambarelli, whose career has been interesting but never quite what one expected it would be when she was appearing under Roxy's management. Somehow, it was the combination of Roxy and his stars which was important. Neither the impresario nor the artist alone seemed to click.

The early career of Samuel L. Rothafel was curiously reminiscent of the early career of William Fox as described in that rather astonishing book which Upton Sinclair wrote for the purposes of rehabilitating the movie magnate and confounding his enemies. Fox started as a tradesman in the smallest way, hardly more than a pedlar furnishing novelties for parades. But he had brains to see better novelty in the new Edison kinetoscope to be exhibited in penny arcades.

Steadily Moved Up to Larger Theaters

Fox's next step was to hire a small store and give brief exhibitions of moving pictures on a screen. With that start he went on to larger things, until he became a great theater owner and producer in his own right. Roxy started in much the same way, tending bar and showing films in a bare back room in Forest City, Pennsylvania. Three reels for a nickel, the reels carried by hand each day seven miles and back again in the snow.

The rest is history. Slowly but steadily moving up in the amusement world. A small theater in Minneapolis, a little larger one in Milwaukee, a better one in New York up at 116th street and Seventh avenue. In those days they were beginning the policy of "presentations" before the running of the films. Special scenery and lighting and costumes, ballets and specialty acts and a grand orchestra. Then the Regent. By that time his reputation was made.

After that nothing but increase in size, elaboration and luxury. Roxy becomes managing director of the Strand, then the largest picture theater in the world. But presently there are larger theaters—the Rialto, the Rivoli, the Capitol. Then the Roxy, which still bears his name. That was the end so far as his individual career was concerned. He becomes merely a part of the gigantic enterprise of the Rockefellers at Radio City.

Theater Too Big for Use in Any Earthly Show

But the Rockefeller frog, trying to blow itself into a bull, all but exploded. The theater was too big for any earthly use. It failed as a purveyor of vaudeville. And even the fortunes of the Rockefellers could not quite stand the expense of the kind of stage show Roxy tried to give on the biggest stage in the biggest theater in the world. Roxy, who had for so long been virtually his own master, resigned, broke down, became ill, and died at 52.

I think myself that bigness killed him. He envisioned the biggest show on earth. Actuality could hardly keep pace with his dreams. He ended his life in disappointment, having done all there was to be done in his field. There were no more worlds to conquer. He came near being the Reinhardt of America.

I prefer to remember him as a gentle and humorous voice on the air, introducing his little troupe of artists to those millions who thought of him as a personal friend.

Lane Calls Tufts Plea Useless

While Tufts students today were planning circulation of petitions seeking reinstatement of Professor Alfred C. Lane, the professor himself characterized the move as "perfectly useless."

Professor Lane, 72, former head of the geology department, and Professor Earle M. Winslow of the economics department, became the first victims of refusal to sign the teachers' oath in statute form when Tufts trustees accepted their resignations.

The students' petition would have President John A. Cousens request Professor Lane to sign the oath in order to be reinstated. Told of the petition, Professor Lane said: "It's perfectly useless. I have no intention of changing my position."

"Let's wait and see."

In statements after their resignations, the two former teachers explained they refused to sign the oath because they believed the law interfered with freedom of teaching.

Neither professor would comment on plans for the future, but friends said that Professor Lane would join Dr. Kirtley Mather of Harvard in a fight to repeal the law. Dr. Mather signed the oath only after protest.

Professor Winslow was reported to be planning to take no part in the oath campaign. He was said to be considering one of two offers from mid-western colleges.

"Should high-heel shoes be worn with a tweed travel suit?" "Are hats being worn with dinner suits?"

"If mannish suits aren't becoming to me how can they be modified with feminine frills?"

These and many other questions pertaining to women's suits were discussed today at the second Fashion Congress luncheon at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

The 12 women selected for their chic from the rostrum of Boston social registerites to act as jurors conducted an open forum on style trends in suits and their accessories.

"Every season for several years we have predicted a tremendous increase in the popularity of suits," said a Boston store executive. "But they're more in demand now than ever and this spring they will dominate the fashion parade."

The co-operating Boston stores submitted suits varied in type and price range. Today's Fashion Congress members feasted their eyes on ravishing silk suits in pastel colors, with matching fox good for Southern wear now; tweed suits for travel by land, sea or air; stunning dinner suits and smart ensembles for sports wear.

The jurors, presided over by Mrs Robert C. Terry, discussed in detail the suits and their accessories. Smartness and good taste were points on which the costumes were judged.

After the ballots are marked and counted, the black and silver tag of the Fashion Congress will be placed on the winning ensemble. These were photographed and will be published in the pages of the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser.

BORED WIFE ALSO WRITES -:- CASH PRIZES FOR LETTERS

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Women and men are opening their hearts to me.

My mail is like a thousand pages torn from the great novels of the world and strewn before me. But the problems, the pleas, the confidences written thereon are finer than fiction. They are real. They are human. They are alive.

In hesitating, abrupt little hands women pen me the sorrows that darken their lives and bring them to the door of the divorce court.

Bright, rosy notes come from girls and boys experiencing for the first time that greatest of all emotions, love. Bashful and afraid, these happy young folks, confide in me as they'd never dream of confiding in Father, Mother, Brother or Sister.

Letters, letters—they are piled before me. White letters, pink letters, blue letters, gold-crested letters. Letters whose perfume bespeaks romance. Letters whose tear stains whisper sorrow.

I answer them all—everyone. I advise them, counsel them, and tell them what to do and what not to do.

It is a task—a task that would challenge the wisdom of Solomon. Often I feel others might help me by giving me THEIR opinions on letters written by others.

It is for this reason that I am paying five dollars daily for the best letters, and a special prize of five dollars for the BEST letter of the week.

Whether your problem is to handle your bost beau; how to make a stay-at-home-husband go places, or keep a gad-about one at home, or how to budget the family income, I shall be happy to talk it over with you and try to help you in my department of the Boston Evening American.

Read the letters below. Study my replies. If you do not agree, write me. Your advice may mean the difference between sorrow and happiness in someone's life.

Wed at 17, Man Discovers Deceit

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man of 27, and I have been married ten years. My wife and I were both 17 when we were married. We had the sanction of our parents and, as was the custom, the approval and even the urging of our church head.

Mother was so Puritan, father so unconcerned and I such a dumb-bell! I knew nothing whatever of life.

So when my wife presented me with a baby girl a little less than six months after our marriage, I merely took it as a matter of course being overjoyed with my first child.

It was almost two years later that my suspicions were aroused sufficiently for me to learn that it would have been impossible for a child to have been born in so short a time.

Then my wife confessed the child wasn't mine. I forgave her, but was about to kill myself, when I was saved by a miracle.

My wife has since borne four children.

Upon attending a large convention to reopenage the church which I pastored, my mind was distraught to learn of two other "affairs" of my wife. The resultant ridicule and confusion caused me to resign my pastorate and quit the ministry.

When practically forced to confess again, my wife told me she wasn't sure whether or not her youngest daughter is mine. I didn't kill the men involved because of the difficulty in reaching their respective cities and because of my inability to obtain a gun at the time.

My problem then, is this:

I love the children—mine or not, I love them dearly. I have a sympathetic love for their mother.

Should I for the sake of the children deny myself true love and stick it out, or should I leave home and find solace in starting life anew?

A lawyer has asked me more than two hundred dollars for a divorce. I am too poor for that.

Please, Miss Fairfax, answer soon, as I shall anxiously await your reply.

Hopefully yours, R.

* * *

MY DEAR SON:

Go back to your wife. You are young. She is young. As the years ago by and your children grow to manhood and womanhood, you will not regret your decision. Time is a wonderful healer.

You say you love the little ones who call you father. You retain a sympathetic devotion for their mother. Cherish—by all means—that love and devotion. It is finest, most wonderful thing you can do.

Start life anew? You ask me that, my boy? Do you really think you could?

Folks may do it in story books or on the stage. But it is impossible in real life. All the rules cry out against it. You've lived with your wife. You gave her your name. You've held the babies in your arms. She—they are as much a part of you as are your sight and hearing.

So forget the gun, my boy. Put aside all thoughts of murder and suicide. You never, deep down in your heart, thought of killing, did you? Of course not.

Forget your suspicions. Forget divorce, hatred and jealousy. Forget everything but the sincere, manly love you want to give your wife and babies. Go back to them today.

Again I say: You won't regret your decision.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Girl Still Looking For Romantic Love

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl 24 years of age and in need of your good judgment.

There is this young man of 26 who has many times asked me to go "steady" with him. He has given me many chances to think it over and now he wants a final answer.

I do not love him. I can only like him as a brother, but he insists I change my decision.

I know I do not love him. Why, I don't even miss him if he fails to see me.

I wonder if he is the man defined to be my companion throughout life. Somehow I feel that "the one man" has not stepped in my life yet, because if he had I would be glad to have him near me and would miss him if he did not come to see me often.

You have heard my problem, and I want to hear from you before I give him his final answer.

"UNDECIDED."

* * *

DEAR GIRL:

You're being romantic, terribly romantic. And I like you for it.

You're waiting for the man with the breath of mystery and air of glamour. What girl doesn't?

Always women have wished and waited and prayed for love with floral trimmings. Some—I might say very many—have wasted the best days of their life in this vain longing for the "chivalrous knight" who never came. And all the while the man who could have given them everything—love, devotion and happiness—was at their feet.

Dear girl, don't make the mistake so many other women have made. Let the young man continue to be your friend. If you have no cause to dislike him.

Of course, if you have reason for considering already with which the fair thing to do is to end your friendship now.

"Silent Man" Husband Makes Life Miserable

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have one big worry that is making my life miserable and I shall be glad and thankful if you can help me. My trouble is this:

For days at a time my husband chooses to "go dumb." He comes home from work, eats his supper in sullen silence and walks out, leaving me to guess what it is all about.

This has been going on ever since I married him three years ago. He does not drink and, except for his "dumb" spells, we have been fairly happy.

He has never found fault with how I manage the house and he is satisfied with the amount of money I manage to save every week, but his "dumb" spells have become more frequent. The last one lasted three days, and when he became himself again I learned that he had had a row with his boss.

I used to try to reason him out of his silence, but I do that no longer. I always get the same answer: "I don't have to talk if I don't want to."

This worry is keeping me awake nights with thoughts of divorce seething in my mind, telling me that a permanent separation is the only solution.

MRS. V.

* * *

DEAR MRS. V.:

I can't help feeling sorry for the wife of the "silent man." Honestly, I think I'd prefer to be married to a man who'd beat me every Sunday morning and smile at me every Sunday afternoon.

All our tried and true remedies seem to fail when applied to this type of individual. Smiles, flattery, tempting meals are all wasted when that grim, "dumb" armor appears.

However, there is one medicine. Thousands of wives have tried it with success. Here it is and give it to your husband in large doses:

As soon as the silence appears, invite your friends to your home. Get the brightest, merriest of the lot. Keep up the conversation and sprinkle it liberally with laughter. If your husband chooses to remain silent, ignore him. But see that the conversation and the laughter go on.

Soon you'll see him beginning to talk. And it won't be long before he'll be smiling and laughing.

At present he's making a mountain out of petty grievances.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Bright, rosy notes come from girls and boys experiencing for the first time that greatest of all emotions, love. Bashful and afraid, these happy young folks, confide in me as they'd never dream of confiding in Father, Mother, Brother or Sister.

Letters, letters—they are piled before me. White letters, pink letters, blue letters, gold-crested letters. Letters whose perfume bespeaks romance. Letters whose tear stains whisper sorrow.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Ann Marsters

But by bit the construction of the old Grand Opera House on Washington street is disappearing. Soon the walls will come tumbling down, and only memories will be left—but what memories they are!

ANN MARSTERS

Because it was so long ago, I am sorry to say (or perhaps glad to say) that I can have no personal memories of those illustrious stars that have trod that stage since the curtain first rose in 1888.

I wish this were a rubber column so I could squeeze in all the recollections of George W. Magee, who was manager of the Opera House at that time and continued so until it fell into the hands of burlesque and the George E. Lothrop interests in 1912

To begin with, he explained why it was called the "Grand Opera House." In those days nearly every city and town in the country had its Opera House—except Boston. So just to get even, it was christened the Grand Opera House—and only once was an opera presented there.

Those Were the Days Of Good Old Melodramas

They were the days, the good old days, of the melodramas—and the titles alone can make shivers run down your spine and tears come into your eyes. For instance: "The Curse of Drink," "No Mother to Guide Her," "Bertha the Sewing Machine Girl," "Why Girls Leave Home," "Nellie the Beautiful Cloak Model," and "The Fatal Wedding."

The Grand Opera House was the only theater of its day to have a women's orchestra. And it was the first theater to have ladies in the box office. Miss E. A. Hardie, who was the first, is now with the Paul Bowser forces at the Boston Garden, in charge of reservations.

And the Grand Opera House was the only theater in the country, before or since, to have "love sofas" (built for two) in the orchestra. There were 80 of these, in the first four rows. Mrs. Jack Gardner often reserved all the sofas for her theater parties.

There must be a lot of you who remember Anna Held. There must be a lot of you who can recall the names of many a notable star whose talent sparkled before your eyes from that now demolished stage. There must be some of you who can sigh over the romance and tradition that is packed in those tumbling walls. And undoubtedly there are many ladies who "simply can't remember back that far."

TO A WHITE DRESS

For whom were you fashioned so daintily cleverly,
Fair apparition that cannot be mine?
Oh lovely perfection, for whom do you hold

* * *

Who will possess you and what hands caress you,
Oh darling, decollette gown of my dreams?
I cringe at the thought of a wealthy and vain

ANN PIERCE.

* * *

It must be love, when an advertisement for a lost dog reads thusly: "Female, dark, thin, shaggy hair, turning gray, tan markings . . . Broken tail, red collar, answers to Molly O."

HOLLAND

LUNTS
Likely to Rehearse
New Play Here

By GEORGE HOLLAND

While Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne are playing in "The Taming of the Shrew" at the Colonial Theater for two weeks beginning Monday, the Theater Guild stars will be working on their next play for New York.

It is called, at present, "Idiot's Delight," according to information which has reached this department.

George Holland

Robert E. Sherwood, Harvard outstanding comedian in addition to the ranks of American playwrights is author of the new Lunt-Fontanne play. Mr. Sherwood will be in Boston next week.

It is reported also that rehearsals for "Idiot's Delight" will begin while Mr. Lunt and Miss Fontanne are playing "The Taming of the Shrew" here. If so, the cast of the new play will be transported to Boston, then to Chicago, and back to New York for the premiere in early March.

• • •

"The Taming of the Shrew" is booked to play two weeks only in Chicago, the same period of time allotted Boston. The sale of seats has been so brisk at the Colonial, wickets that less than two-dozen seats in the orchestra remain in the opening-night rack. Sale for the Tuesday performance is extremely lively, also.

• • •

When the Lunts (Miss Fontanne is Mrs. Lunt and how agreeably helpful she is to her husband may be deduced from the tradition that his name must come first in the advertising) have finished their engagement at the Colonial, Ina Claire will move in with her new S. N. Behrman play, "The End of Summer." Mr. Behrman, a Worcester native, wrote "Biography" for Miss Claire.

I hear that the blonde star was affected deeply by the death of her former husband, John Gilbert. As a matter-of-fact, a most reliably-informed visitor told this pillar that Miss Claire is ill and that rehearsals of her play have been held up.

• • •

The star's indisposition will not delay the Boston premiere, however. Dates are booked, prior to Boston, in both Hartford and New Haven. If necessary, these can be cancelled.

• • •

In a point well taken, S. M. Waller, who is Walter Hampden's representative, writes:

"Your usually comprehensive column this morning (Saturday) carried the headline: 'Famed Stars Feature January Playbill.' I looked in vain through the subject matter for ' e name of the most famous of all the stars coming to Boston this month. Needless to tell you that it is the name at the top of this paper.

"Of course I know that the engagement is two weeks off, but still it begins in January, and therefore it seems to me that it had a place under such a headline."

It should have had: Walter Hampden comes as "Cyrano de Bergerac" to the Shubert, Monday, January 27.

New Norfolk Downs Theater Popular

The newly opened Regent Theater in Norfolk Downs is proving one of the most popular of the out-lying motion picture houses, Arthur A. Quinn, recently made manager of this theater, is giving the patrons many outstanding films. Tomorrow's attraction, "David Copperfield" was chosen by critics as the best production of the year.

Colman Film at The Bowdoin

"The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo" with Ronald Colman and Joan Bennett, and "Music is Magic" starring Alice Fay are the main pictures at the Bowdoin Theater. Several additional features complete the program.

Gala Bills Open This Week

By MARION FRENCH

An unusually great combination of stage and screen entertainment will be presented at the Metropolitan Theater beginning Friday.

"Ceiling Zero," James Cagney's latest starring picture is the film attraction. Those hilarious, ribtickling head-liners, George Burns and Gracie Allen, will be seen in person with their own complete musical comedy production.

"Ceiling Zero," a thrilling screen romance of the air, has such prominent actors as Pat O'Brien, Stuart Erwin, June Travis and Isabel Jewell in support of Cagney. The story concerns the daredevil exploits of three war buddies, members of the commercial flying forces. While carrying mail and passengers they face death many times. There are plenty of thrills promised in this film. Several triangular love affairs, one between Cagney and June Travis, supply the love interest.

Burns and Allen will take over the Metropolitan stage with one of the nuttiest, wildest and funniest revues ever presented here, it is said. Such headliners as Ben Blue, Cardini, Stone Vernon Foursome, Jen Marvey and the famous Bonomo Troupe, Jacques Renard, are featured members of the cast. Grand and Georgo, of course, will offer plenty of their grand and individual style of fun.

• • •

The Paramount and Fenway Theaters boast some good pictures beginning tomorrow. "Miss Pacific Fleet," starring those snappy girls, Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell, will be seen. Claudette Colbert's latest picture, "The Bride Comes Home," is the other film attraction.

Cantor Due At Loew's

Eddie Cantor will be in town next Wednesday with Parkyarkus, (Harry Einstein), the Boston boy, who appears with him in his latest film, "Strike Me Pink."

These comedians will be seen on the screen at Loew's State and Orpheum Theaters in the "Strike Me Pink" picture on January 24. This is reported to be the funniest of Eddie's six musical extravaganzas for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

In the cast in support of Cantor such prominent names as Ethel Norman, Sally Eilers, Jack La Rue, Sunnie O'Dea and Brian Donlevy appear. The Gorgeous Goldwyn Girls form a lovely background for all this array of talent.

Parkyarkus, alias Mr. Einstein, was a Boston advertising the air as a "heckler" and stooge, executive who joined Cantor on He had made his radio debut previous to this when he appeared for a cereal concern's advertising campaign. At that time he developed the synthetic Greek accent for which he is famous.

Tremont's Films

Claudette Colbert will be seen on the Tremont's screen for the next two days in "She Married Her Boss." "Love Me Forever" with Grace Moore and Leo Carillo is the other picture shown.

Tickets for Cagney Fans

Real screen fans.

Here's the second contest in the Boston Evening American's five-day solo memory contest inspired by the cosmopolitan screen productions, "Ceiling Zero," which opens at the Metropolitan Theater Friday. Jane Cagney has come a long way from the day when he first hit Jay in the face with a grapefruit to prove his affection. He was graduated from being the film's leading "woman smacker-downer" to "No. 1 tough guy," and then reformed to become Hollywood's leading government agent in "G-Men" pictures.

In company with Pat O'Brien, he's been in the Navy and the Marine Corps. Now he's in commercial aviation and movie fans, and readers of the Boston Evening American are invited to see him at the Metropolitan Theater when "Ceiling Zero" opens Friday in conjunction with the personal appearance of Burns and Allen.

Cagney, shown above with June Travis, is one of those intrepid fliers who laugh at death and respect only friendship. Beneath the picture is printed a list of screen actresses many of whom have appeared opposite him in films.

Can you name them? If you are a real screen fan you will have no difficulty.

Check the names of the actresses who have played the leading feminine roles in a Cagney picture. The first contest appeared yesterday. Three more are to follow. When you have completed the entire series of five contests, attach a plain

At Last! "Music Goes---" Reaches Film Capital.

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

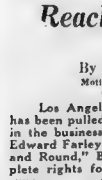
Los Angeles, Jan. 15—The biggest coup of 1936 has been pulled by Harry Cohn. While every producer in the business was trying to sign Michael Riley and Edward Farley and their song, "The Music Goes Round and Round," Brother Cohn up and grabbed the complete rights for Harry Richman's musical.

Within two weeks Riley and Farley, who came up from obscurity with this song, will make their debut as screen actors, showing the dear world how they play this tuneful number which has everybody fairly dizzy. If you haven't heard it, go and buy the music, for you should really be humming it.



Louella O. Parsons

Riley and Farley arrive early if not sooner, as the entire Onyx Club Orchestra, and the Richman picture will rightly be called "The Music Goes Round and Round."

Warner Brothers have finally come to a realization that Errol Flynn is valuable property and should not be shunted into mediocre stories. Hal Wallis, who has been reading stories and discussing plans for young Flynn, has decided to star him in "Robin Hood." What memories "Robin Hood" brings back of Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., who at the very height of his glory played this sovereign, gay thief who stole from the rich that the poor might live, and made one of the sweetest pictures of his career. Doug was back today on the United Artists lot, getting ready to cast "Marco Polo." He will make all the interiors in Hollywood and many exteriors in China.

I talked with Jock Whitney at the Countess Di Frasso's party and he waxed eloquent over a colored film which he has arranged to produce. It's to be a musical comedy romance on the order of "La Cucaracha"—all in color and, although its unnamed as yet, Mr Whitney has made his plans to have Lloyd Corrigan and Robert Edmond Jones produce it with Steffi Duna, the star of "La Cucaracha," as head woman. Frank Morgan and Luis Alberni have likewise been signed but here's the little surprise package that the very attractive Mr Whitney is keeping. He will introduce a new leading man, Charles Collins, whom he believes will win all the film audiences with his charm and ability.

So young, so beautiful, so alive and so eager to get ahead, Margaret Enrlich, 18-year-old blonde, told me of her screen ambitions at Marion Davies' party, and slipped into my purse her screen rams. Margot Early, I made up my mind to speak to the casting office of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and tell them they had overlooked a bet in this child, whose enunciation and surprisingly good diction were flawless. Two hours later I was trying to comfort her mother for the death of Margaret. The child had been killed in an automobile accident on her way home from Marion's party.

Chatter in Hollywood: Just when everything is quiet and peaceful, up bob the Marx brothers. The arguing going on amongst them over their next story has been terrific. "A Night at the Opera" was such a hit that the boys are ambitious to equal this picture and that is going to be plenty tough. So they have decided to settle the bitter, bitter discussion with a game of golf. Chico will play with a tennis racket Harpo with one golf club, and Groucho with a bow and arrow! The first Marx to sink the ball in a hole gets his wish on the star. How about the ticket selling privileges, boys?

Dave Diamond is something more than a producer. He is an author, it appears. He has just written a story of immigration called "By Exile Express" which he is getting ready to put on the screen for Universal. He has signed Cesar Romero, Noah Beery, Jr., and Warren Hymer as his principals and now if he can get Jean Muir for the leading lady he will be exceedingly happy.

Snapshots of Hollywood

The DARRYL ZANUCKS celebrating 12 years of happy married life with an anniversary dinner; the bride looking so young. DARRYL was accused of marrying her when she was in the nursery; MRS. WILLIAM GOETZ wearing one ring, the only piece of jewelry the robbers didn't steal from her at Palm Springs; ANN SULLIVAN suggesting a jewel shower; VIRGINIA VALLI FARRELL planning to sail with RUTH and LESLIE HOWARD for England to join CHARLIE, but not for at least two or three months; LADY MENDL much upset over the reports that she is wearing a green wig, proving that she only colored her own hair green; what will happen when the dye fades should be another good story; PATSY KELLY, guest of honor at a surprise birthday party given her by WILMA COX; JAMES MONTGOMERY FLAGG expected in Hollywood; ALFRED VANDERBILT, who has taken a house in Beverly Hills for the racing season, opening it with a cocktail party. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

SCREEN MIXUPS

It Takes Brains to Write

A shot of gray matter is just what Gracie Allen needs, thinks that other radio comic, George Burns. So when he heard Gracie was to be guest columnist for the Boston Evening American this week, he rushed to give her an injection.

Gracie Allen To Be Guest Columnist

Gracie Allen, whose radio antics have entertained millions, is to be a guest columnist of the Boston Evening American for one week starting tomorrow.

During that period each day the talented feminine half of the Burns and Allen combination will fill a column of the Boston Evening American with her brand of sense and nonsense mostly the latter.

Miss Allen along with George Burns is to appear in person on the Metropolitan Theater stage being a big feature.

They top an all-star vaudeville bill with their own revue and have Ben Blue, Cardini, the Stone Vernon foursome, Gene Marvey and Lenore Renard to help them with their antics.

But Miss Allen has promised not to confine all her humor and funning to her stage appearances.

Each day she will have a pillar full of nonsense in the Boston Evening American.

Don't miss this chance to see Gracie as a columnist.

Her first contribution is to be in tomorrow's Boston Evening American and each day following for one week.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

Artist Dan Cunningham of 243 L street, South Boston had his first contribution to the Artists' Corner published some time ago, but this new cartoon displays so much originality and skill that we thought you boys and girls would like to see it.

Our compliments Artist Cunningham, and many thanks. Glad you like your membership card.

Girl Tells of Thrilling Adventure In Garment Factory

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Well, sir, here's Lillian Krowitz of Ely avenue, Astoria, N. Y., with the story that is going to earn ten bucks for her and make her a Distinguished Member of the Adventurers Club. Lillian works in a dress factory, where there's a lot of machinery. She has always been very careful about that machinery, and never got into trouble with it.

But you can't get through life without at least one big thrill. Old Lady Adventure, herself, will see to that. She couldn't get Lillian tangled up in the machinery—so she got her tangled up in something worse.

Lillian got tangled up with a neighbor—the woman on the next machine in the West 27th street factory where she worked. Lillian got a job there in April, 1920, and she hadn't been working more than half an hour before she noticed certain peculiarities in the actions of an old German woman who worked right beside her.

The woman seemed harmless enough, but she kept mumbling to herself and making grimaces at Lillian. Lillian began to get frightened. She stood it as long as she could, and then she asked the boss to transfer her to another machine.

Well—it seems that just about everybody else in the factory had asked the boss to do them that same little favor. Every girl in the place was just a little bit scared of that mumbling woman. Somebody had to take the machine next to her, and since Lillian was the last to arrive—well—the boss just couldn't do anything for her.

"Don't pay any attention to her," he told Lillian. "She's been that way for years. She wouldn't hurt a fly."

The boss was right about it, too. The German woman WOULDN'T hurt a fly—knowingly. But still Lillian wasn't satisfied. "Somehow," she says, "I had a premonition that something was going to happen. I decided to finish out the week and quit.

But Lillian never had a chance to quit that job. Things began to happen sooner than she expected.

The very next day Lillian's neighbor began acting more queerly than ever. Instead of mumbling, she began talking out loud, yelling at Lillian and threatening to kill her with a scissors if she even so much as looked at her.

Lillian was so frightened that she couldn't work. Every minute she expected to feel the scissors plunged into her back. She got so nervous about that that she hardly dared to turn her back to the woman at all.

Right then Lillian decided that she wouldn't even wait until the end of the week to quit. She made a deal with herself to throw up her job just as soon as she had finished the dresses she was working on. She figured she could have them all done by the following day—and that wouldn't be a minute too soon, either. So the next morning she brought her lunch with her so she could work right through the lunch hour and finish the whole batch of dresses before closing time.

But bringing her lunch wasn't such a good idea. The German woman brought her lunch, too. And the result was that, at lunch hour, she and Lillian were left alone in the room.

The factory was on the ninth floor of the building. It was a cool spring day, and a stiff breeze was blowing through the open window. It made quite a draught on Lillian's back, and half way through her lunch she got up and closed the window. That started something.

The German woman, who had been quiet until then, watched Lillian moodily as she closed the window. Then she got up and opened it again. She stood looking out for a minute, and—as Lillian watched her—she climbed up on the sill and started to jump out.

Lillian screamed and ran toward the woman. She caught her around the waist and pulled her down from the sill, but still the woman tried to throw herself through the window. And then, in her mad frenzy, she wrapped her arms around Lillian in such a fashion that, if she had ever gone out of that window she would surely have dragged Lillian with her.

So Lillian fought for her life. She weighed somewhere in the neighborhood of two hundred pounds, and I weighed less than a hundred. But God must have given me superhuman strength in that moment, for I struggled and held her inside."

But even superhuman strength doesn't last forever. Gradually Lillian felt that strength waning—felt herself being dragged over the window-sill. If there had been someone else in the room with her—someone to whom she could have called for help, things might have been different. But the big loft was deserted, except for her and the German woman, and it looked pretty much as if it would be entirely empty in another second or two, with its last pair of occupants plunging toward the sidewalk nine stories below.

And then—as Lillian struggled with the last ounce of her strength to keep from being dragged to her death, the door opened and two of the men employes came in. Lillian screamed to them—but they had already seen her predicament. They came on the run and dragged both women away from the window—Lillian in a state of collapse, and the mad woman, now gone completely insane, kicking and biting at her rescuers. They took the poor old creature off to the psychopathic ward at Bellevue Hospital, and that's the last Lillian ever saw of her. But she will never forget her—or the time she had with her, either.

Lillian sure busts into the adventuring business with a loud bang—and she's probably the last person in the world you'd ever expect to have such a hair-raising thrill. You've had an adventure, too, Mabel. Remember? Well, write it up and send it in to me. And don't forget to watch Old Lady Adventure's show-window for another swell yarn tomorrow.

(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, Jan. 15—An important part of the final statistics for December is now available. I will, therefore, consider the showing made last month in the light of figures.

* * *

In the first place, the iron and steel industry turned in a favorable showing. The average daily production of steel ingots rose quite sharply, and, even after making allowances for seasonal variation and long-term trend, was up.

I figure it at 74.4 per cent of "normal" years (71.7 per cent in November. This is the highest rate since July, 1935, and, with that exception, since August, 1930.

Pig iron production decreased a little, but not as much as usual in December. So the "adjusted" index rose. At 70.3 per cent of "normal," it compares with 69.9 in November, and is the highest since October, 1930.

The only question is whether the unusual volume of automobile production is the cause of this showing, and whether the motor producers can keep up their pace. Perhaps the slight decline in blast furnace activity in December suggests a little slowing up.

Steel production, however, is but little out of line with the indicated current requirements of the chief consumers. Any let-down in activity, therefore, promises to be but temporary.

* * *

The New York State employment figures are reassuring. There was a slight decline in the number of factory employes, but only about as usual for the season. The number was 7.6 per cent greater than a year ago.

The factory payrolls in this state actually increased 3 per cent and were 14.3 per cent larger than in December, 1934. This clearly indicates that employes were getting more nearly full-time work, and thus making better weekly earnings.

That is the way for both employer and employe to benefit by recovery.

* * *

Accordingly, department stores did a good volume of business in December. The Federal Reserve Board reports that 488 stores scattered over the country had sales which equaled 84 per cent of the average for 1923-25. This compares with 81 per cent in November, and as about 6 per cent greater than a year ago.

The gains, too, were widespread, ranging from 2 per cent in St. Louis to 9 per cent in Atlanta and Chicago.

On the whole, price seems to have had more to do with the increase in sales during the year than quantity of merchandise. Retail prices were higher, and more high-priced merchandise was sold.

* * *

One of the reasons for the rather favorable statistical showing in December is found in the increase in building activity. This great industry continued its upward climb. Building permits usually recede in December, but last month they gained considerably.

The adjusted index is the highest since October, 1931. It is nearly twice as high as a year ago. Apparently construction contracts actually awarded made a similar showing, with residential contracts prominent.

The gain in building was quite general throughout the country.

* * *

It is notable that railway traffic turned up distinctly, and there were more cars loaded in December than in any December since 1931. I figure the volume of freight tonnage at about 63 per cent of normal. That is not very high, but is the best since August, 1931. It compares with about 59 per cent in November.

On the other hand, commodity prices were irregular in December, and closed the month a little lower than at the beginning. A bill of goods that cost $104 at wholesale on December 1 was priced at $103.60 on January 1.

BUSINESS Free From BANKS

MOVEMENT BEGAN IN 1921

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service)

New York, Jan. 15—In the bombastic pre-depression days, bank mergers were justified on the alleged ground that big banks were needed to finance increasingly big business units.

But to an extraordinary extent, the largest and strongest business corporations have freed themselves of dependence on the banks.

This emancipatory movement began after the depression of 1921 when all too many business men discovered the disadvantage of finding themselves in the hands of the banks.

Accordingly, when the finance skies were clear, strong companies obtained large quantities of cash for working capital through the sale of securities directly to investors.

Moreover, other factors were operating in the same direction to alter the demand for commercial credit.

The enormous quickening of the tempo of transportation enabled business enterprises to get along with relatively small inventories, obviating an important need for short-term bank loans.

Moreover, the swifter movement of freight decreased the need for temporary financing.

Furthermore, from the short term standpoint, business, though above the low point, is still in the subnormal zone. Accordingly, there has been an absence of temporary peaks which require bank financing.

* * *

In the circumstances, despite recovery, bankers find the demand for sound commercial loans smaller than the supply.

When I was last in Chicago I discussed this subject with Walter J. Cummings, chairman of the Continental Illinois Bank & Trust Company. Recognizing the independence of very large concerns, Mr. Cummings was encouraging his associates to encourage smaller concerns which want to borrow.

In view of the changing setup, it appears that the best prospective bank borrowers are the up and coming little fellows.

CHANGE In Trade SEASONS

SLACK PERIODS ELIMINATED

By Leslie Gould
International News Service Financial Writer

New York, Jan. 15—In the last two or three years, and particularly in the last six months, a change has been taking place in the so-called "seasons" of business.

It raises a question of what influence it will have on the stock market trend, new security offerings, corporation profits, employment and the buying habits of the nation.

Normally there are four so-called "seasons" for industry, general business and the security markets.

There are the spring and fall recoveries and the mid-winter and summer slow periods.

For industry, the fall recovery period "normally" gets under way some time in August or the first of September and carries through into November and sometimes to the first of December. Then there is a letdown and general closing of shop around the first of the year for stock taking, with the spring recovery getting under way in January or February.

This recovery carries through to May and sometimes into June, with the summer letdown following.

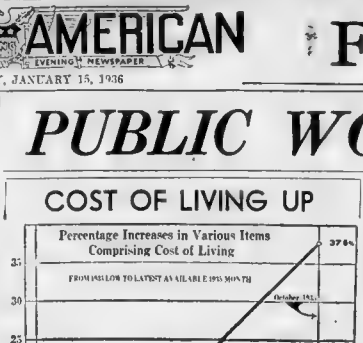
In general business, such as retail lines, the recoveries start just a little later and carry a month or so past the letdown of industry, with December and the Christmas holidays the peak.

The stock markets follow about the same pattern, although it tries to anticipate the business results. There have been two distinct periods of correction or dullness in past years. The recoveries have been in the early spring and fall and the corrections or dullness in the summer and winter.

The fall recovery generally begins to gather momentum in August, getting stimulus from reports of orders to industry. Then December is usually the time for correcting the excesses of the fall advance in spring revival getting under way in January or February. This usually carries through to June, with July the low point.

Now, this pattern seems to be changing a little. The fall spurts in the fall and spring, the course of industry—general business has spread over the months.

COST OF LIVING UP



Every item in the cost of living has increased from the 1933 low level. Food prices lead, with an increase of 37.6 per cent. All together, the cost of living, as compiled by the National Industrial Conference Board, has risen more than 17 per cent from the depression low in April, 1933.

PUBLIC WORKS

REFORM

Engineers Ask New Controls

By Associated Press

New York, Jan. 15—A "Supreme Court" of public works was recommended today in a committee report to the American Society of Civil Engineers which opened its 83rd annual meeting.

The committee, headed by Fred Lavis, New York consulting engineer, proposed the federal public works program should be based "on sound economic consideration," and formulated by "a permanent, nonpartisan authority of supreme court caliber."

Lavis, in his report, emphasized the committee's inquiry into the subject was "confined solely to determination of the principles that should control expenditure of tax revenue for public works and not with the promotion of governmental policies for or against the appropriation of public monies for relief, business stimulation or the expansion of community services."

"Yardsticks" to determine justifiable utility rates were condemned as "unnecessary, expensive and unjustified."

"Further," the report said, "all the information such 'yardsticks' could possibly yield might be had from study of the numerous publicly owned electric, gas and water supply plants that now exist. These are of all sizes and varieties and their capital and operating cost are either public record or else may be readily obtained."

The incoming president of the society, Daniel W. Mead of Chicago, will succeed Arthur S. Tuttle of New York at a dinner tonight.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, Jan. 15—Harmony prevailing at stockholders' meetings of the principal local national banks yesterday was in sharp contrast to the restlessness marking similar gatherings in 1935 as well as in 1934.

To the casual onlooker, the calm dignity with which the reports of presiding officials were approved suggested a closer sympathy with the management than the delicate task of solving problems adversely affecting earning power.

The idea conveyed itself, at the same time, that the average bank stockholder was satisfied so long as his investment continued to return a dividend regardless of the fact that in many cases officials could not guarantee the safety of existing rates under present conditions. The heavy fons of the bank stock market after the institutions which held their meetings announced their 1935 earnings reflected the declining trend of operating profits reported to stockholders.

Rail Surcharges Found Wanting

Higher freight rates alone won't solve the railroad problem, operating officers admit. The Interstate Commerce Commission last April granted the carriers permission to levy surcharges on certain types of freight. These surcharges, it was estimated, would increase rail revenues by about $72,800,000 over the period of a year.

Now it is estimated that on an annual basis the surcharges will bring in only about $60,000,000. The actual results have undershot the original estimate mainly because the carriers have found it necessary to pare down the surcharges in order to successfully compete with truck and water carrier competition. The railroads now look forward with eagerness to the results of the planing of motor trucks under ICC regulation, and the proposed plan to regulate water carriers also.

December Cotton Consumption Off

Census bureau estimates consumption of cotton by mills of the United States during December at 498,320 running bales (counting round as half-bales and excluding linters) compared with 507,836 in the previous month and 417,341 bales in the like 1934 month.

For the five months ended December 31, 1935, consumption was placed at 2,413,888 bales, against 2,134,094 in the like period of 1934.

Cotton on hand in mills on December 31, 1935, totaled 1,427,484 bales, against 1,301,276 on November 30, 1935, and in storage 8,386,784 bales, against 9,567,935.

December exports, excluding linters, amounted to 577,480 running bales, against 504,685 in December, 1934. For the five months ended December 31, 1935, exports totaled 3,452,268 bales, against 2,358,827 in like period of 1934.

December imports were 12,738 bales, against 8062 in December, 1934. Five months imports were 42,483 bales, against 48,700 in same period of previous year.

During December 23,301,370 spindles were active, against 25,072,972 in December, 1934.

DEBTS Washington's GIFT

SPENDERS MUST BE HALTED

By Julius G. Berens
Financial Editor, New York American

With the new year the Washington administration hands over to the American taxpayer a bill for 35,000 million dollars. That's the bill to date.

The trouble is not only its present size but the fact is that the bill grows at the rate of ten million dollars EVERY DAY.

It will grow billions more this year and billions more next year, more the year after, without a stop UNLESS:

UNLESS the taxpayer rises on his hind legs and begins to holler.

UNTIL the taxpayer takes ACTION about it.

Our debt is alarming.

It is GROWING at a pace which threatens disaster to the nation, for it spells BANKRUPTCY.

Let the taxpayer, let the voter, let everybody in the country make no mistake about it

INFLATION is more than a pet word of financial writers, of economists, of politicians or business men.

It is one of the WORST HAVOC-BREEDING PHENOMENA OF CIVILIZED COUNTRIES

People who have been through the wild inflation of other lands lack words powerful enough to explain their horror of such an era.

Prices go sky-high. Wages, salaries, incomes of all kinds cannot keep up with the rising cost of living.

Invariably the inflation comes the same way. A government goes reckless in spending. It uses up all the national credit, then abuses it.

Distrust arises and the credit disappears. The government, face to face with making good on its fantastic pledges to the populace, goes desperate. It prints ever more and more debt, constantly promising miracles to its people, until the whole balloon bursts.

That is the position this country faces now.

The great national lark of spending of ages ago reached the climax of safety

Yet only the other day President Roosevelt could not estimate the expected deficit for the next fiscal year by any but the indefinite statement that it would be "FROM ONE TO THREE BILLIONS."

We are dedicating our ground.

Already taxes take up from one-fifth to one-third the national income

Still the national debt piles up.

Isn't it time to call a halt?

The present New Deal pledge of the American public should be "WE PLEDGE OURSELVES TO PUT AN IMMEDIATE HALT TO THE SPENDING FANTASY AND WE DEMAND SEVERE TAXES TO REWARD OF POLITICIANS PROMISING MIRACLES"

Electric Power Output Gains

New York, Jan. 15 (AP)—Electric power output for the week ending Jan. 11 was 1,997,570,000 kilowatt hours, a gain of 6.2 per cent over last week and 11.2 above the same week a year ago, the Edison Electric Institute indicated today.

All major geographic regions continued to show increases over the year before, with the Rocky Mountain district showing the best gain and New England the smallest. Percentage advances were: New England, 7.6; Middle Atlantic, 10.1; Central Industrial, 12.1; West Central, 11.9; Southern States, 13.6; Rocky Mountain, 21.5; Pacific Coast, 13.5.

Rate Reduced

Amsterdam, Jan. 15 (AP)—The Netherlands Bank today reduced today from 3½ to 3 per cent.

UNITED FRUIT

Reports 1935 INCOME Result

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

United Fruit Co. is again among the first of the big companies in publishing its annual statement with today's announcement of net earnings of $10,359,222.50 for 1935.

On a per share basis this is equivalent to $3.54 compared with $4.50 shown in 1934.

The Comptroller of United Fruit in releasing the figures for publication adds that they are subject in verification and final audit upon receipt of year-end cables and statements of accounts from the various offices of the company. Lacking in offic a statement from the h.z Boston concern, it is only possibl o speculate on the unfavorable effect of import fruit quota throughout the world and the disastrous results of various hurricanes, in regarding the decline in earnings.

New England cotton textile mills loom to have embarked on a definite movement for smaller, more compact, efficient plants. These are many versions of what the Amoskeag may do along this line and the Nashawena Mill of New Bedford offered stockholders a plan for reorganizing the plant which has been accepted. President Gardner says the management sees in mind a plan which will reduce the number of spindles from the 194,000 formerly operated to approximately 62,000. Looms in operation will be similarly reduced from 4,144 to somewhat under 1500. Lower taxes are on the way in some sections and a movement for extremely efficient plants may bone close in filling the gap between northern and southern mills

Minute analysis: General Asphalt has accumulated quite a rabid following . . . The news coming through from New York is to the effect $4 per share is practically certain this year . . . From royalty oil receipts . . . Which in other years dribbled away through unprofitable subsidiaries . . . New blood, new ideas and new uses for Asphalt's products highlight management policies . . . Together with elimination of "dead wood" augur for new high record earnings . . . Wrote up the company around 20 on the advice of a Boston analyst . . . And will do the late informant to add us advise its retention and new purchase on fresh declines.

The Industrial group seems to have negotiated a standstill agreement with the rails. It neither reacts as expected nor rallies with the carriers. While we do not alter our previously expressed ideas of holding what we have without major additions or subtractions, we do think an amendment is needed in view of industrial share action. The rails, with a definite objective level already noted here as between 46-48 on the Dow-Jones rail index, may achieve their new peak ere the industrials are sold under cover of such strength. In that event, we must watch for a more important indication of reversal than we expected.

• • •

Comment: The blue chip stocks are conspicuously absent from current dealings . . . Their place has been taken by the public favorites under $10 . . . Not a particularly reassuring sign . . . And, if is were not for the mid-out performance of rails, one that would invite a good bit of professional short selling . . . Texas Gulf Sulphur is a late arrival . . . It may prove one of those fire-sale affairs that as often marks the windup of a protracted upswing . . . Texas Gulf has developed nicely and being alert to this development does not mean immediate bearishness.

No Stooges For Connie | "Flash" Hollett Bruins Purchase

By BILL GRIMES

BILL GRIMES

"Can you imagine Art Ross trying to slip a fast one over on me by planting a couple of 'stooges' behind our bench," inquired Conn Smythe, the dynamic power behind and manager of the Toronto Maple Leafs, after last night's game with the Bruins.

"I thought Art was smarter than that. He should have known that I'm acquainted with all of the regulars in Section 23 and would suspect something as soon as I saw a couple of strange faces in our midst.

"Just as soon as I saw Ross' plants, I knew I'd been framed, so I sounded off on those two birds and told them where to head in.

"But, t'ell with Ross and his stooges.

"Let's talk about a more pleasant subject.

"The capacity crowd—they tell me there were 16,129 paid admissions—which attended tonight's game was the greatest tribute ever paid the game of hockey.

"I've been perfectly sincere with you when I've declared that Boston is the greatest hockey city in the world. There's nothing like it in this country or Canada. You've got to have a winner in the other cities to get the customers to put their money on the line. Not here. All that's necessary to pack 'em in here at the Garden is to have a club which is out there trying. They'll come whether the club is in first or last place."

• • •

Conservative Play Banned

Conn Smythe before the game half decided that he'd order his Maple Leafs to play Kitty-bar-the-door hockey against the Bruins. He declared that he had a perfect right to refuse to allow his club to open up after the defensive game the Bruins played recently in Toronto.

"I oughta give them a dose of their own medicine," declared Smythe, at the University Club. "It would serve 'em damn well right if I refused to allow the Leafs to enter Boston territory.

"But it would be a tough break on the fans, and although we don't receive a penny from any of our road games, there're the ones who count.

"I'm telling you now, and you put it right in the book, if the Bruins don't open up in Toronto Saturday night, the Maple Leafs will pack that defense for 60, and if necessary 70 minutes, the next time we come to Boston."

• • •

Bruins Cash in on Breaks

But the Bruins, playing the smartest brand of hockey in their history, got the breaks and for a change were able to capitalize on them.

With Joe Primeau out of the line-up and "Hap" Day suffering from a bad back, the Maple Leafs could have offered a plausible excuse for resorting to defensive hockey.

King Clancy was in one of his most belligerent moods. From the start to the finish, he had a chip on his shoulder and stepped into, or tried to, every Bruin who came within charging distance.

Shortly after half-time in the first period, Clancy and Shore tangled and for a few seconds it looked like a Donnybrook was in the making. On a Shore rush, Clancy checked the Bruin captain, and upon starting up the ice Eddie barged into Clancy. And, then, bang, they were off swinging rights and lefts at each other and then wrestling to the ice.

The fisticuffs with Eddie Shore did not cure "The King" for as soon as he returned to the ice, after serving his major penalty, he started in again knocking Bruins down at random.

Bruins Purchase "Flash" Hollett

Bill "Flash" Hollett, who was purchased by the Bruins today, causes a black mark to be chalked up against Conn Smythe, for there's no more promising star in hockey than Hollett.

Smythe is unusual in some ways. If he takes a dislike to any of his players, the victim is soon on his way to some other club, regardless of his ability or his value to the Maple Leafs.

Hollett is only a kid and he has, for reasons of his own, sold himself to the hockey public as a clown. But, he's plenty smart, for he realized that the Maple Leafs were not paying him enough money for playing major league hockey.

While he was trying to iron out his salary differences with Smythe, before the start of the season, Flash came up with a few remarks which he should have withheld. And, after Smythe had retaliated, Hollett shot the works and right there and then blew his job with Toronto.

The Bruins have made a ten strike by acquiring Hollett, who started his hockey career as a kid in Nova Scotia. He won his chance to play with Toronto because he was a lacrosse player and cute enough, when he signed his contract, to have a clause inserted whereby he was to get a tryout with the Maple Leaf hockey club.

• • •

Now that Bill Hollett has been sold to the Bruins, I wouldn't be surprised if the next players to fall victims of Smythe's axe were Chuck Conacher and Harvey "Busher" Jackson.

It's a well known fact that "Busher" is in bad with Smythe and Conacher would be, if he had answered a letter he recently received from his boss.

Smythe contends that Jackson and Conacher are not bearing down. That they are coasting along on their reputations but still drawing down $7000 and $1000 bonuses if they are selected for either of the All-N. H. L. teams.

Just as soon as some of his players who are at Syracuse acquire a little more seasoning, there'll be a general shakeup of the personnel of the Toronto Maple Leafs.

ROBERT Offers Danno JOB

AS SPAR MATE AT $100 A DAY

By Ringside

Yvon Robert, French-Canadian youngster, took time off today from his training for his bout with Ed Don George at the Garden on Friday night to add insult to injury in his harassing of Danno O'Mahony, heavyweight champion.

"You have not the courage to meet me in the ring," Robert telegraphed O'Mahony.

"How about being my head training partner at $100 a day? I will go easy with you and promise not to spoil your features. You have never answered my challenges and I doubt if you will answer this."

George, when informed of Robert's message to the champion said:

"Did you ever hear of such a fresh kid before? He must think he is great. Well, he had better forget about O'Mahony and get his mind on our match for Friday, for I have a lot of things to pay him back for."

Gym Workouts

Both Robert and George worked out at Buckley's gymnasium on Friend st. Robert went into the ring at 2 p. m. and wrestled Lt. Jan Speelman. Arthur LeGrand and Dan Detroff. The French-Canadian appeared in fine condition and stepped through his training pace at high speed.

George followed two hours later, starting at 4 p. m. He did not work as hard as Robert. The former title-holder has been training at his home in North Java, N. Y., and appears as fit as a fiddle.

He will work hard today at 4 p. m. but tomorrow will go into the gymnasium at 2 p. m. and Bobby will take the later hour. The change was made to permit George to be interviewed over station WHDH at 4.35 p. m.

Robert will not train at Buckley's gymnasium today. Instead, he will workout in Boston's gymnasium at Quincy.

ODELL On Harvard STAFF

With the appointment of Howard Odell, former University of Pittsburgh backfield star to replace Mike Palm as the Crimson's varsity backfield mentor, and the surprise promotion of Neil "Jake" Stahley, last year's freshman coach as "field coach," Harvard's varsity grid staff is now intact.

Acting upon the recommendation of Head Coach Dick Harlow and Director of Athletics William J. Bingham the committee on regulation of athletic sports approved the following staff for 1936:

Head Coach—Richard C. Harlow.
Field Coach—Neil J. Stahley.
Backfield Coach — Howard Odell.
Line Coach—Rae Crowther.
End Coach—Wes Fesler.

The appointment of Stahley and Odell increases the number of coaches on the varsity staff to five one more than a year ago, when Stahley officially was heralded as freshman, though he also filled the role of chief scout.

He will, however, continue his scouting duties in his new position as "field coach," a brand new office on the Crimson staff, created by Harlow. As "field coach" Stahley will probably rank as assistant head coach to Harlow, chief scout with undefined duties, and a roving assignment under which he will oversee the activity of every department of the varsity squad.

Stahley's new duties, in fact, will be similar to those of Jimmy Dunn, the co-ordinator of last year's squad, except that, unlike Dunn, Stahley will be limited to the varsity squad alone.

Dunn, incidently, is said to be a certain member of the Crimson's 1936 staff, despite reports to the contrary, although the junior varsity and freshman staffs will not be announced for at least another month.

Danger for the Bruins here, as the Leafs score. Bill Thomas passes from behind net to Buzz Boll of the Leafs, who beats Tiny Thompson, shown prone in front of the cage. Max Kaminsky, Eddie Shore and Charley Sands fail to prevent Boll from getting away the scoring shot. The 16,000 fans were apprehensive, with the Bruins lead cut

16,000 Get Fill of THRILLS

DONNYBROOK AT START

Displaying the smartest brand of hockey they have ever shown, the Bruins won their third consecutive game and quit the N. H. L. cellar at the Boston Garden, where they defeated the Toronto Maple Leafs, 4 to 1.

As predicted, the game was a thriller and more than 16,000 fans trekked out of the Garden, firmly convinced that the Bruins are going to be serious contenders for the Stanley Cup.

Cooney Weiland put the Bruins out in front in the first period on a clever combination play with Peggy O'Neil and then Dit Clapper increased the Bruins' lead to two goals early in the second period. But, just before half time, Bill Thoms whipped a pass out from behind the Boston cage to Buzz Boll, who beat Tiny Thompson with a quick snap shot.

The two clubs battled along separated by one goal until late in the final chapter. The Leafs carried the attack to the Bruins but they were unable to break through the Boston defense.

Less than three minutes before the final bell, Tiny Thompson passed up into the center zone, at a time when the entire Maple Leaf team was gangin him, and Babe Siebert raced out of the pack, picked up the puck and started for George Hainsworth.

Charlie Conacher caught Babe about 30 feet from the Toronto nets and although the big Leaf draped himself around the Bruin, in some manner Babe managed to get off his shot, which beat Hainsworth. Two minutes later, Siebert got another clean break and again outfoxed the Maple Leaf goalie, for the fourth and final tally of the night.

The game started off to be a regular Donnybrook. The players did not miss any opportunities to knock each other to the ice and particularly King Clancy, who drew the first penalty for charging into Max Kaminsky. Then he charged into Eddie Shore, giving the Bruin captain the "business."

Eddie retaliated as he started up the ice and a fist fight ensued. They took a few swings at each other and then began to wrestle, finally falling to the ice, as the other players rushed to the scene of the conflict. After peace had been declared Shore and Clancy were given major penalties.

Although there was plenty of excitement throughout the entire game, most of the thrills and the best hockey were packed into the first 20 minutes.

Clapper's second period goal was a smart play. He went down the ice and into Toronto territory, where Chuck Conacher stole the puck from him. Wheeling with terrific speed, Clapper snapped the puck off Conacher's stick and cut for the Toronto net to beat Hainsworth with one of the prettiest goals seen at the Garden this season.

Bruins

Buy Hollett From Maple Leafs

The Bruins made a ten-strike today by purchasing Bill ("Flash") Hollett from the Toronto Maple Leafs. Hollett is considered one of the most promising players in big-time hockey.

Hollett will play for the Bruin Cubs this Saturday against the Providence Reds. When he gets back into shape he will join the Bruins. Hollett had broken his hand, but is fast rounding into shape.

Husky Six Invades Amherst

The teams are of equal ability, according to their brand of play against M. I. T. Last year the Huskies broke up a long losing streak by defeating the Statesmen.

N.Y. Commissioner Suspended

New York, Jan. 15 (AP)—Chairman John J. Phelan of the New York State Athletic Commission announced today the suspension of Louie Beck, one of the commission's inspectors, in connection with charges by Nat Fleischer, editor of Ring, a boxing magazine, that Beck had associated with the gambling element in various New York fight clubs.

"Pending the hearing Friday, January 17, at 2 p. m. on the final decision on charges made in the New York State Athletic Commission by Nat Fleischer that Louie Beck, chief inspector of this commission was associated with the gambling element and using his official connections with the commission to peek over the shoulders of the judges assigned to various bouts and thus gain knowledge as to how the votes of these judges were likely to go and then joining a group of gamblers in the rear of the boxing club and passing on his information and participating in the betting, Mr. Beck is hereby suspended effective immediately."

Woman Wizard With Cue Here

Among the sports celebrities due in Boston next week is Miss Ruth McGinnis of Honesdale, Pa., who is the women's professional pocket billiards champion of the world.

She will appear here as one of the features of the third annual National "Better Billiards" program. The world's greatest feminine billiardist will be here Friday and Saturday, making many appearances.

Friday afternoon at 2:30 she will be at the Capitol Billiards Co., 2 High street, where she will appear under the sponsorship of Stonewall Jackson, the manager. Stonewall was, for many years, announcer at Fenway Park.

Friday noon she will be at the Huntington Alleys; Friday night at the Winthrop Yacht Club and Saturday night at the Recreation Billiards Rooms.

Mr. Boston Sharkey Gets Test Feb. 7

By Jack Conway

JACK Sharkey will know definitely after his bout with Tony Shucco at the Garden on February 7 whether his comeback is going to lead to a tussle with Joe Louis.

Shucco, young, an exceptionally good boxer, ambitious and a sharp puncher, will give Sharkey the most opposition he has received since he lost his championship to Primo Carnera. Shucco, like Primo, is an Italian.

Mr. Boston

Since dropping his title to Carnera, Sharkey has fought King Levinsky, Tommy Loughran and Unknown Winston.

Shucco, at the age of 24 and his ring future still very much in front of him, is a much better boxer than Levinsky, Loughran or Winston.

Johnny Buckley, Sharkey's manager, didn't want to sign the former champion to meet Shucco. He preferred Ford Smith, who beat Buddy Baer, or the gigantic Ray Impellitiere as an opponenut for the former champion.

"I'll fight Shucco," Sharkey told Matchmaker "Rip" Valenti of the Goodwin Club. "Why not? He has proved his ring ability, and I shall have to be at my best to win.

"If I were to take on Smith, Impellitiere or some other outside heavyweight and win by a quick knockout, you would find some of the Doubting Thomases shaking their heads knowingly and saying Sharkey had been handed another setup.

"Those who saw Shucco in his 12-round draw with Al McCoy realize he is a first class fighter. I thought McCoy would lick Shucco, and was surprised when Tony made such a fine fight.

"I don't think Shucco can beat me, but I appreciate the fact he has youth on his side and is well schooled in the fundamentals of boxing," Jack opines. "It should be a good fight, and it will give me a line on how I would go against Joe Louis."

SHARKEY FIT

AS SHARKEY begins his training grind for the Schucco bout, he is as fit physically as it is possible for a person 33 years old to be.

Dr. Klein, who examined Sharkey for the boxing commission when he fought Unknown Winston, stated the former champion's physical condition was that of a man 28 years.

Sharkey has lived carefully since he started boxing a dozen years ago. He has had long rests between bouts and does not carry any marks from the ring wars.

Shucco is a fast, shifty boxer who is particularly effective when on the defensive. Sharkey will require all of his old boxing skill to break through Shucco's defense.

Shucco has a large local following, particularly among Italian fans. He has been working hard with Sharkey since the latter lost to Carnera.

He considers the Sharkey match the stepping stone to greater things in the boxing game. You may expect to see Tony put on the great effort of his ring career when he faces the former champion.

LOUIS TOPS

I LOOK for "Bomber" Joe Lewis to knock out Charley Retzlaff inside of five rounds in their 10-round bout in the Chicago Stadium on Friday night.

Five years ago Retzlaff, in the same fistic stable with Billy Petrolle, looked like one of the most promising young heavyweights in the country.

SCISSORS ACE HAS NEW HOLD

Henry Piers of Holland, the scissors king, will rely on his "million dollar legs" to clip Floyd Marshall out of his path to a title bout, in the feature of Alex MacLean's wrestling show tonight at the Boston Arena.

Piers, the best in the scissors line since Joe Stecher, is close to the pack bowling at the heels of Don O'Mahoney. He expects to jump in with the leading challengers by crushing Marshall in their two out of three falls finish fray.

Reports are that Piers will break out with a dazzling new hold tonight to befuddle Marshall. The new maneuver is to be known as the "round and round" hold.

A slugging semifinal will find Charlie Strack and Chief Little Moose colliding. Strack is in a very ugly mood and the Indian is in for a stormy night. Special bouts will be Odillo Marchioni vs. Hermi Olson and Art LeGrand vs. John Schaeffer.

Preliminaries have Abe Stein vs. the cave-man, Gene Dubuc; Steve Brady vs. Farmer Mack and Fred Doyle vs. Frank Perry.

Arena Card

MAIN BOUT

Henry Piers, Haarlem, Holland, vs. Floyd Marshall, Colorado.

SEMI-FINAL

SPECIAL BOUTS

Art LeGrand, Quebec, vs. John Schaeffer, Cambridge.

PRELIMINARIES

Steve Brady, Holyoke, vs. Farmer Mack, Chicago.

First bout at 8:15. Main bout at 10.

COX, GILL Seek Jobs on B. C. TEAM

Although the makeup of the Boston College relay teams will not be determined until next Monday when Coach Jack Ryder holds the final time trials, prospects for another crack two mile outfit are bright.

Boston College has been noted for its two mile teams in the intercollegiate track world for years and it is the ambition of most Eagle runners to make this quartet.

Coach Ryder has by no means decided who will be on his team but the speed being shown by some of his more prominent candidates indicates that this year's four will maintain traditional high standards.

Two crack sophomores, both former English High stars, Dick Gill and Art Fox are very much in the running for the quartet.

Coach Ryder will not reveal the times at the University Heights board track but it is no secret that the pair of sophomores, and Downey, a senior, and McKee, a junior, are out front.

The mile team may be even better than the two mile outfit, according to the Eagle coach. One reason being that the mile team has a much greater number of aspirants.

McCarthy Says Yanks Will Win

New York, Jan. 15 (INS)—Expressing the utmost confidence in his team, Joe McCarthy, manager of the Yankees, arrived here today, declaring nothing can beat the Yanks out of the American League pennant. He did, however, admit the Tigers are the team to beat.

McCarthy will confer with Col. Jacob Ruppert, Yankees owner, and Business Manager Ed Barrow later today, and will give a boat-race dinner to the baseball writers at Jack Dempsey's restaurant tomorrow night.

LITTLE STICKS TO GOLF TEACHING

WANTS TO AID PLAYERS

Los Angeles, Jan. 15—Lawson Little, amateur golf champion, declared today he would continue to write his syndicated golf column despite the criticism of oJhn G. Jackson, new president of the United States Golf Association.

Jackson makes the unusual criticism that Little's articles contain too much advice to golfers.

"I shall continue to write my golf articles," asserted Little today. "Before I started writing, I took the matter up with Prescott Bush, association president at the time, and later with John G. Jackson when the latter was elected president.

"I told them I was writing my own articles. I didn't have a ghost writer, and as a result there was no objection to my articles. I have written every word that has appeared under my signature.

"I have tried to give the best possible advice to golfers. I am now criticised for giving too much advice to golfers.

"I shall keep right on telling golfers everything I know about the game. I hope I am able to give information to thousands of golfers which will make them good enough to beat me.

"I have my secret golf formulas which I am not willing to reveal to anybody who is interested in the links game."

Little looks for a great year in golf. He says that with the depression lifting more players will be back on the links, while the major tournaments will attract more star golfers and create more public interest.

BEACON HILL YOUNGSTER IN ICE DERBY

RACE FIELD FOR JAN. 26 CLASSIC

MOGULS FEAR EARLY SWOON

Chicago, Jan. 15 (US)—Charley Retzlaff gave his solemn word to the Illinois Athletic Commission today that he will not fall in a swoon when he sees Dead Pan Joe Louis stalking toward him in the ring at the Chicago Stadium Friday night.

Meaning no reflection upon such stout-hearted gentlemen as Maxie Baer and the other playboy, Kingfish Levinsky, Chairman Joe Triner and Packey MacFarland of the commission gave Charley to understand that he had better "get in there and fight—or else."

A liberal interpretation of the "or else" was that if Charley displayed such evident symptoms of helpless terror as some of the Brown Bomber's recent victims (still no reflection upon Max and the Kingfish) he would be plastered with a suspention by the Illinois commission.

Nation-Wide Ban

And Packey added as a clinching warning:

"Charley, we want a fight out of this. If you stall or if you quit, if you don't give your best, we'll not only suspend you here, but I'll try to have you suspended all over the country."

Charley appeared to take the hint.

The promoters expect close to a $100,000 gate, one of the few of this size since the Stadium was opened to the public.

Although very few fight fans believe Retzlaff has a ghost of a chance with the Brown Bomber, the rangy North Dakotan appears really confident that he will make a good showing. He said today:

Louis Right Again

"I've knocked out a lot of men and I think I've got a good chance to give Louis the same medicine. I'm not afraid of him. I don't say for sure I'll win, mind you, but I think I've got a good chance. I'll be in there trying. I've got as good a right hand as any of them and if it lands, you will know that something has hit him."

Louis has struck it pretty close in a number of his fights calling the round in which he would administer the coup de grace. He was no sure as to the Retzlaff bout, saying:

"I don't know just what round I'll stop him, but the fight won't go the 15 rounds. I'll get him sooner or later. I'll just be in there watching for my chance same's as I always do."

It was bad news for Charley today that Louis, after appearing sluggish in his earlier training bouts, now is sounding into top form, hitting accurately and powerfully and with perfect timing.

VETERAN Beats Young NET ACES

By Murray Kramer

There is an old adage which has been floating about for some time to the effect that "Youth Must Be Served."

Now it may be brash to come out openly and chirp "piffle" to this misconception, but yet it is in keeping because this very day there is a woman, 34 years old, who asks no quarter from man or woman as far as squash racquets is concerned.

It seems difficult to visualize a woman who has passed the half century mark and is still active in athletics and yet that is very definitely the case of Miss Eleanora "Elsie" Sears, famed Boston sportswoman.

In Title Play

For example, Miss Sears tok part in a Tuesday morning workout that would be considered strenuous for many men.

Your correspondent met Mr. Charles Earle, who suggested that your envoy and himself be a gallery or two to watch Miss Sears play her match against Mrs. Sam Batchelder.

When the sets were over, Mr. Earle leaned over the railing and in a friendly manned said to Miss Sears:

Plays Pro

"No, Mr. Earle," she replied, "I'm not warmed up yet and I believe I will play a few sets with Johnny Reynolds."

When the five sets were completed the pro was soaked with perspiration and was puffing a bit. Miss Sears was also sweating evenly. She looked up and thanked her audience of two for their attention and retired.

Carolina Ace In K. C. Games

Entries for the 15th annual Prout Memorial Games at the Garden will not close until Friday and it is expected that the list will go over 200 before Chairman Bill Kenney calls it quits.

The entries were supposed to windup today for the meet which takes place a week from Saturday, but so many important names have yet to come that the chairman figures it would be prudent to wait until the end of the week.

Among the latest batch of letters, is the entry of Harry Williamson who hails from the University of North Carolina. Harry will run in the Bishop Cheverus 1000 and is certain to give Chuck Hornbostel plenty of competition.

Williamson has been competing against such stars as Cunningham, Venzke and Bonthron for two years. He has always been close to the winners but the Grand trio so completely overshadowed him, that Harry's excellent work has been generally overlooked.

He is expected to get under 2:20 for the 1000 and if he does, Hornbostel will have to be at his very best to win.

Derby Entry List Open 4 More Days

By Walter Kiley

Only four days left before entries close for the biggest outdoor sports event of the 1936 winter season, the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser Silver Skates Derby.

And once again may we stress the fact that the Silver Skates Derby is just as much open to those lacking in competitive experience as it is for those of proven ability.

Just remember this fact, that almost every Silver Skates Derby ever before held, whether in New York, Detroit, St. Louis, Toronto or other spot, has been won by a dark-horse, one entirely overlooked in advance of the event.

Ice Promised

The weather man, with whom we have been in constant touch, assures us that cold weather is headed Boston-wards.

With cold comes ice and with ice comes our chance to get out and polish up. To practice faithfully over the closing days before the big event, to get that final burst of speed and stamina to hold it to the wire.

Massachusetts skaters would do well to pay particular attention to the speed races for the state championship to be held as part of the annual St. Moritz skating and skiing carnival at Quincy on Sunday.

All our Silver Skaters will be welcome out there. No previous entries need be submitted. The only requirement is to report to the clerk of course in time to be entered and given competitors' numbers.

That experience of competition may serve in fine stead when the Silver Skates events are conducted one week later at Franklin Field, Dorchester.

At this time the most important thing of all to remember is that there remain just four days to file entries.

5000 WAYS To Lose Bet On Races --Hildreth

By Bob Ahearn

Sam Hildreth, the noted trainer, once said there are 5000 ways you can lose a bet on a horse race.

Hildreth was a noted plunger in his day and had the financial backing of Harry F. Sinclair, the oil baron. Many a time the Rancocas Stable horses of Sinclair would come up 9 to 20 and 2 to 5 when they figured on paper as legitimate 2 to 1 shots.

Some incidents in our ramblings around the New England and Maryland racing circuits have shown us that a horse can be beaten in many ways. A horse can be left at the post; strangled at the gate by an assistant starter; can be carried wide; cut off; pull up lame or make his move too early.

And you must know by now that a horse can break a leg; spread a hoof; get caught in a pocket; bleed; sulk; need a race; eat too much; have saddle slip; have rider fail; not to be trained to pitch; to be overtrained or drop dead.

If you think long enough you cite many more reasons that will answer why your horse failed to win. Sam Hildreth probably included all the points in a thoroughbred's body that are liable to injury during the running of a race, when he made his famous crack.

Big Problem

The shrewd handicapper's major problem is getting a price on his horse. It is a well known fact that betting systems are far more important than the methods of selecting winners. The best of the group are those that are capable price makers.

A horse can be quoted at 6 to 1 and in a handicapper's books that means a 2 to 1 shot. To him, it is an excellent spot for a wager, especially if the favorite isn't very strong.

Frank Greenfelder, now one of Mort Mahony's key men in the mutuels, is a keen student of the handicapping art. Greenfelder was the original Sharpshooter of the Morning Telegraph and broke up the racing game under some of the greatest handicappers of the day.

Racing Notes

Some rules laid out by Greenfelder of interest to all racing fans include: Mares run best in the autumn; leading riders turn in more poor rides than appreniice boys show good rides; always look at the track conditions before the entries.

Front running horses run best on muddy tracks; watch the racing charts for horses that are used up when the jockey figures they were beaten, forgetting the distance of lengths that separated them from the winners; because a horse won going away carrying an impost of 126 pounds it doesn't mean the bang!ail will show a 26-pound improved race under 105.

(Fourth of a series on "The Turf and Its People" will appear on these pages shortly. It will be a brief resume of jockey records.)

Kievex Best Bet on Opening Card

By Dave Wilson
(Selections made for fast track)
BEST BET—KIEVEX

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 15—Mantagna, William H. Furst's stretch-running Sweep On colt, is fancied to cop major honors from 19 rivals in the $3500 added Hialeah Park Inaugural Handicap, six furlongs opening day feature, at this picturesque plant here tomorrow.

Kievex, hero of the Cocoanut Grove purse at Tropical Park, shapes up not only as the probable winner of the Belleglade, one mile and a sixteenth secondary feature, but as the outstanding wagering proposition on the difficult card of seven races.

FIRST—DORIS B., BELIEVER, JIM JOHN

DORIS B. hangup second to Sleek, is dropping 11 pounds off that most recent endeavor and looks all over a winner. BELIEVER came from far out of the clouds to drub a shifty lot of platers last time at Tropical Park. JIM JOHN holds plenty of class and was a winner last time.

SECOND—JOHN P. WAR, GAME BOY, GRAND JESTER

JOHN P. WAR comes highly recommended by the clocking fraternity. The Chestnut blazed three furlongs in :35 from the barrier for a final. GAME BOY has trained brilliantly and looks all over the one to fear. He concluded training with three parts 1 :35 1-5. GRAND JESTER, second to Tale of Woe at Tropical, has had the benefit of racing condition.

THIRD—WEE TUNE, LORD TOURNAMENT, CHARACTER

WEE TUNE turned in a corking third behind Visigoth and Laughing Sun in 1:10 4-5 last time. In front of that the Phillips filly stepped six panels in 1:11 2-5, to lead home Lady Higbns and Little Dinah. LORD TOURNAMENT, moving up from $2000 top and bottom company, appears next best under the weight arrangements. CHARACTER is fond of the racing strip.

FOURTH—MANTAGNA, WHOPPER, STAND PAT

MANTAGNA, nicely placed under 110 pounds, will be favored by one of the outside positions. WHOPPER, on general eastern form, is clearly the horse to drub. STAND PAT, top weight under 126 pounds for the remainder.

FIFTH—KIEVEX, POT AU BROOMS, KANE ENTRY

KIEVEX will have racing conditions on his rivals, and figures to never leave the issue in doubt. POT AU BROOM, a successful Texas campaigner, whirled eight panels in 1:42 for a final and figures to offer the contention. FIDELIS and GO QUICK, which will run coupled as the Kane entry, figure to break into the picture.

SIXTH—JAMES BOY, HOMEWORK, DANCING CLOUD

JAMES BOY, on general Tropical form, is entitled to top rating in a field of this sort. HOMEWORK barely nosed out by Crowned Head, figures close up on the strength of that most recent endeavor. DANCING CLOUD shapes up best of the others.

SEVENTH—SEAWICK, EASIEST WAY, JOHN'S BIRTHDAY

String along with SEAWICK. This filly will be right at home over the treacherous grass footing and should be right there at the finish. EASIEST WAY is heaps better than recent Tropical Park form. JOHN'S BIRTHDAY figures close up.

Tribe May Try Berger

Youngster Son of Ex-Ace

By Joe Cashman

The until-further-notice Braves may take on another Berger.

President Bob Quinn has been looking over the records of one Darrell Berger, a Cleveland high school hero and son of Louis Berger, former big league ace, and is seriously considering taking the youngster South.

Quinn, while in Columbus years ago, started Berger senior on his pro career and opines if the boy is half as good as was his dad, he's worth a real trial.

Slow Starter

"But I hope the lad answers a summons faster than his father did," chirped Bob.

"After I plucked Louis off the sandlots it took me almost two months to get him to report. He finally joined us in St. Paul and his first words were that he deeply regretted having traveled so far from home.

The Red Sox have done a little housecleaning. Doc Legett, veteran catcher, has been released outright to Syracuse, while Cecil Trent, young outfielder who was at Charlotte last season, also goes along to the Salt City under option.

Natick Tommy Connolly, American League umpire-in-chief, was a Tuesday visitor at the Fens. He requested that a section of the advertisement which borders the left-field foul stick be painted green in order to make it easier for his "jumps" to judge whether drives clearing or hitting that part of the barrier are fair or foul.

Connolly heard considerable praise about the umpiring ability of Bob Brinkley of Dorchester and Johnny Mullin of Cambridge, two young standouts in New England college and semi-pro circles.

He pointed out that many promising arbiters in this section are overlooked because there is no minor league headquarters to afford them an opportunity to make a pro bow.

The Braves roster is ready for the printer, indicating that Bill McKechnie's lengthy negotiations for a certain pitcher are about to succeed or are definitely off for the time being, at least.

Louis, Schmeling Go for Philly

Philadelphia, Jan. 15 (AP)—The lure of a national convention crowd—and its free spending reputation—has tempted Mike Jacobs toward bringing his Joe Louis-Max Schmeling heavyweight fight here in June.

Jacobs is coming here a week from today to discuss the suggestion the bout be staged for the Democratic national convention crowd. Conferees will include Julian Black, one of the Brown Bomber's managers; Joe Jacobs, who pilots Schmeling; Mayor S. Davis Wilson, city Democratic chairman, John B. Kelly; former state athletic commission chairman, Frank Weiner, and Dr. Milton F. D'Ellsco.

Grove Picks Sox to Win Pennant

Philadelphia, Jan. 15 (AP)—Lefty Grove predicted today the coming pennant drive will find him better than last year when he topped American League's pitching for earned runs.

The number one comeback of 1935, arriving here after signing a new contract for next season, which is reported to carry a salary boost, said he's near the peak of condition even now.

"Because of the accident to my arm in 1934, I could take no chances last year, and always had to be careful," he said. "But now that it's strong again, I'll be able to hit it up harder this year."

For the Red Sox in general, the fireball artist saw even brighter possibilities. With the purchase of Jimmy Foxx, Doc Cramer and Pete McNair from the Philadelphia Athletics, Lefty believes the Sox are "tops."

Senators Demand $500,000 for Myer

YANKEES REFUSE TO PAY SUM

New York, Jan. 15 (AP) — The Yankees' infield causes most of Joe McCarthy's worries as he prepares for the 1936 American League season.

Joe would like to pull off a deal or two before the club starts south next month, but a $500,000 demand for Buddy Myer, who is by no means a youngster, and a high price tag on Pinky Higgins make it appear unlikely that he will succeed.

Myer, who led the league in batting for Washington last season, is the player Joe really wants, but not at $500,000, the price set by Clark Griffith.

The need for an able second baseman who can last through the season was emphasized when McCarthy, who arrived yesterday to start the preparations rolling, said he expected to start Tony Lazzeri on the keystone sack again.

Tony can be expected to do well for a couple of months, Joe admitted, but about mid-season he begins to weaken. The available reserves are Don Heffner and Jack Saltzgaver, who haven't shown yet that they can fill the bill.

Rolfe Doing Well

Then there's the question of Shortstop Frank Crosetti's ailing knee. Crosetti was put out of action by an injury late last season and the Yanks were put into a hole. He underwent a knee operation, and reports he is in good condition.

First base, where Lou Gehrig is apparently a fixture, and third seems to be the least of McCarthy's problems even if he doesn't get Higgins from the Athletics.

Red Rolfe has been doing so well there that the manager refused to show any interest in Freddy Lindstrom, recently released by the Cubs. If the Higgins deal goes through, Rolfe may be tried at second, although Joe is doubtful about his success in that berth.

The battery department doesn't worry McCarthy, with Bill Dickey behind the plate and Lefty Gomez, Charley Ruffing, Johnny Broaca, Monte Pearson, Johnny Murphy and Jimmy De Shong doing the tossing.

The club's strength there and hopes for strong comebacks after "slump seasons" by Gehrig, Gomez, Chapman and Dickey, make McCarthy confident again.

"The team that beats the Yankees will win the pennant."

Maribel Vinson Sails for Olympics

New York, Jan. 15 (AP)—A second squad of members of the United States Winter Olympic Team, four figure skaters and an assistant manager, was scheduled to sail for Germany today on the Washington.

The skaters were Maribel Y. Vinson of Boston and Robin Lee of Minneapolis, the national champions; Erle Ritter, young Minneapolis skater who finished second to Lee, and George E. B. Hill of Boston.

2 CAMERAMEN SHARE NEWS TIP AWARDS

By THE NEWS TIP EDITOR

Another week and $50 more has been given away by the News Tip Editor to alert persons who saw news, called Liberty 4000 and gave the Boston Evening American a head start.

Exclusive news in the sanitary report in the case of Marie Simone Sevigny, charged with the "mercy slaying" of a patient, wins the first prize of $25 for a Providence, R. I., man.

Second prize of $10 was split two ways and awards of two persons who not only helped the American secure the news first, but also to get pictures.

One was given to a Waltham man for photographs of an automobile which was struck by a train at the Beaver Brook crossing in Waltham. The driver of this car was killed.

The other $5 award went to a Lawrence woman for first information on rate hearings held in that district.

A Cambridge taxicab driver who witnessed a fatal accident in that city wins a $1 award; a newsboy also got a dollar for his alertness as a Cambridge girl who ran away from home.

A man and a woman who gave the Boston Sunday Advertiser information on the whereabouts of a girl from the Harvard bridge and a fatal Sudbury crash are $2 winners.

While skating on the Mystic river, a youth saw a boy saved from drowning by a 14-year-old girl and relayed this tip to us; and won a dollar for his reporting.

Other dollar winners were an agent for a gas company who witnessed the shooting of a man in the West End; and a schoolmate who knew a woman patient at City Hospital had $3700 concealed in the lining of her coat.

A Brighton man, who loves the sea, and who has helped us considerably with exclusive news from the port, has been given $2 for his story on a disabled vessel making her way back to the harbor.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 15, 1936

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

One Man and War

AN ARLINGTON man's analysis of the League of Nations in the current "election" on the League in Greater Boston is worthy of note. A caller recently presented a leaflet ballot captioned: "Here Is an Opportunity to Register Your Opposition to United States Participation in Another World War."

"Fine!" exclaimed the Arlington citizen. "I'm for that!"

"Then vote for the League of Nations," said the caller. "The ballot is on the other side of the page."

"What, the League of Nations? What war did it ever prevent or stop?" asked the citizen.

"Well, er—er—this is to keep us out of future wars—to prevent our sons being cannon fodder," said the caller, weakly.

"Let's see," said the Arlington man, counting on his fingers, "Italy's in the League. Ethiopia's in the League. China's in the League. Japan was in the League until she bolted. The League hasn't averted war for Italy. It hasn't stopped war for Ethiopia. It didn't save China a vast territory. It didn't stop Japan. England and France, both members of the League, are on the brink of war.

"In every war that has been fought since the big one, the combatants have been in the League. We're not in the League and we're not in any war. We know we won't be in any war as long as we stay out of the League and mind our own business and leave foreign entanglements alone.

"Yes," said he, "I'll vote to stay out of war by staying out of the League."

AND as he marked his ballot accordingly he wondered what Henry Cabot Lodge would say about his State, of which he was so proud, if he could know that the League of Nations Association, Massachusetts Branch, 40 Mount Vernon street, Boston, claimed 161,000 Massachusetts voters have voted in favor of American entrance into the League.

Let Us Speed Recovery

Return of seven million dollars of impounded processing tax funds to packers and textile companies of Massachusetts by a Federal District Court ruling will do much to stimulate recovery.

Raw Deal restrictions gradually being removed, the Bay State industrial ship is on a more even keel, and the rocks in the channel to prosperity are not so plentiful as a year ago.

The problem today is to further clear the channel to make certain a long and continuous voyage. There are many solutions, but one stands out above all others. It is this:

Create a market for the products of industry. BUY AMERICAN.

Somerville Takes Lead

Every motor vehicle owned by the city of Somerville has been enrolled in the Boston Evening American's Roll of Honor—to save lives.

To Mayor Leslie E. Knox goes the honor of being the first Greater Boston executive to order all municipal cars to display the slogan: "I DO NOT DRIVE TO INJURE."

Governments of other cities should follow this splendid example, for, in the words of Mayor Knox:

"A campaign that tends to put a stop to the maiming and killing of persons on our highways should receive the approval of everyone."

Challenge to Youth

(Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

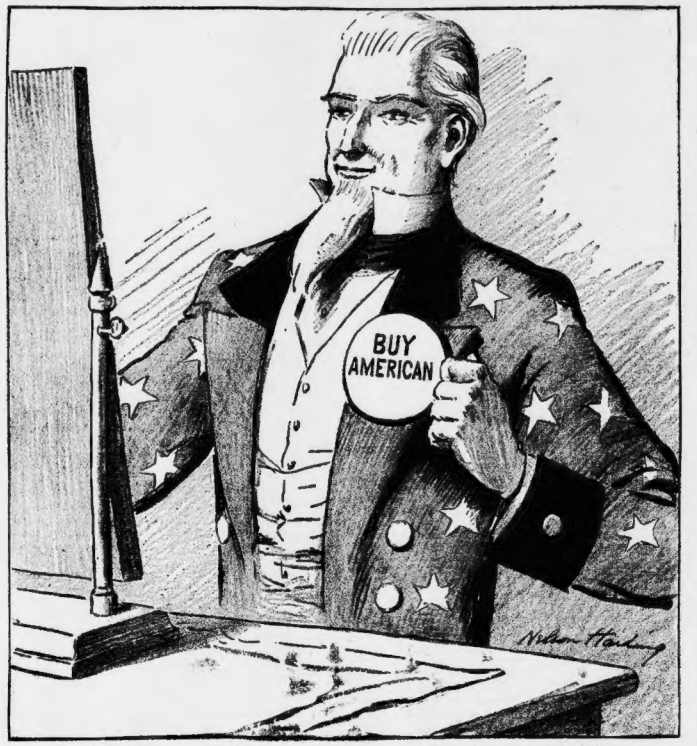
Youth should study this picture. Especially those who would retire men at 60 and put them in wheel chairs. Sam may be a little braver than most men, but there are plenty of able bodies in the three-score-and-ten class.

'That's My Motto!"

By Nelson Harding



Uncle Sam has pinned a button On his lapel and is looking At the emblem in the mirror

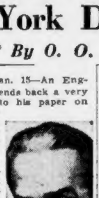
New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Jan. 15—An English journalist sends back a very what-he essay to his paper on New York celebrities. He says in short he saw very few for the simple reason those he regarded important are seldom in public places, i. e. cafes, theaters, night clubs.



O. O. McIntyre

The people one really wants to see in New York, he points out, have the elusiveness of Britain's Barrie. Then he swings this from the ankle:

"Of course there are the Shaws, the Augustus Johns who wallow in the pleasant illusion that celebrity is conspicuousness."

Not altogether correct, there is much truth in his sum-up. In the past few years there has grown up in the metropolis a "celebrity pack" that runs in full yolck in every chase. If publicity is fame in its finer sense they have achieved it with a bang.

First nights, supper clubs and bar openings have become more or less a standardized crowd. It is possible to write who is present without attending. A statistical meanie declares that not five per cent measure up to qualification—whatever they are—of celebrity.

Burgess Meredith and Gelett Burgess are going to toss a party and invite all the Burgesses and all the Mereditns in the phone book. There are 46 Burgesses and 11 Meredithe, the old 57 varieties, in all. The Queen of the Burgesses, a beauty shop proprietor, has been selected but Burges Johnson will not be invited unless he sticks another "s" in his front name.

Henry Winston Harper, dean of the Graduate School of the University of Texas, has sent me one of the famous red bow ties which have distinguished him sartorially for years. He is now in the 70's. It is the only sort of tie he wears, known in the Fan-handle as "the genuine Harper red." The color is based on the oxyhemoglobin of the red blood cells in human arterial blood. In other words, the shade of the life giving fluid which stimulated red corpuscled action. One of Dean Harper's ties and a raw hamburger have inspired even a sissy to chase a tough guy up a shade tree.

A visitor to Paris tells of seeing Richard Le Gallienne, the American poet, buddied about a charcoal fire at a table along a lost Paris street—wrapt in the misty scarves of far-away dreams." He has been away many years now and has become a gaunt figure with long, snow-white hair. His daughter Eva has become internationally famous. His own works grow more famous. Yet down the last lap of life he prefers a lonely, self-imposed exile.

Two New York head waiters of prominence are Theodor Szarvis and Theodore Titze. Frequently their identities are confused because each was once a guardian of the silken entrance ropes in the Ritz dining rooms. And known by his first name. Few head waiters hold the auspicious posts they did during the boom. A number were nipped in the market, as much of their wealth came from tips of brokers they served. Those unable to suffer the tedium of few customers and fewer tips opened restaurants of their own or went back to their foreign homes. About a half dozen were reputedly worth around $500,000.

Every writer I know leaps to the trade-last like a trout to the fly. George Ade expressed the idea during his Chicago days by a reply to a fan letter:

"I have got to the point where I no longer crave truth. There is only a little of it and others need it more than I. What I want is to be soothed and flattered as your letter does."

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

There's a fine advertisement in the current magazines. It is being run by one of the nation's leading pharmacists. But it is not a medicine ad—it broadcasts something far more comforting and healing than any drug.

The ridge of a dark range —steeped in shadow. Above, the sleeping sky, just quickening into dawn. Breasting the ridge, facing the dawn, its radiance glowing on their upturned faces, two figures stand—a man and a woman.

Elsie Robinson

They are of today—these two. They are part of today's new freedom and opportunity. You can see it in the fine stance of their vigorous bodies—in the joyous swing of their stride. Here is a new sort of union . . . a union braver and more beautiful than even Romance at its best.

They do not "own" each other —this man and woman—as lovers were once supposed to own each other. There is no crippling possessiveness—nor any secret barrier of suspicion and resentment.

MORE THAN LOVERS

They are more than man and woman . . . more than lovers. They are human beings. And as human beings they are united for a wider adventure than love. They are united to serve Life. They are not merely part of each other—they are part of life.

They are one in a new and noble sense, these two—one as men and women have never dared to be before. He does not patronize her—she does not manipulate him. They have put such maneuverings, such evasions and bullyings behind them. They are stepping away from the whole, dark realm of sex distinction into the new dawn of sex equality.

There they stand—facing the new day. Behind them lies the darkness of the past, with its ignorance and repression. Before them lies the dawn of a new era, with its larger wisdom and release. And they are taking it together.

They are taking it together. She is not hanging back on him, holding on to her feminine privilege. He is not holding out on her, gripping his masculine advantage. They are giving their all, without reservation, to each other—to Life.

And here is as tall a sermon as was ever preached, as beautiful a vision as was ever dreamed. Here is a vision of man and woman companionship as it MIGHT and MAY BE—

A vision of love without lies—
Of passion without pretense—
Of partnership without heckling or haggling—
Great-hearted partnership that gives for the joy of giving . . . without bargaining or recrimination.

NOT EASIEST WAY

It will not be easy, this new union. They must sacrifice much that was pleasing to their vanity soothing to their laziness and cowardice. The man in this new union will not be pampered and praised as his father was . . . the woman will not be petted or protected as her mother was.

They cannot seek refuge in sentiment or flattery or whines. They must take LIFE as it is—and THEMSELVES as THEY ARE. And it will not always be pleasant—

There will be periods of disillusion . . . periods of furious debate and frank warfare. They will falter and fail . . . And in time their eyes will be dimmed with tears . . . and their young flesh scarred . . . and their young strides lowed—

But out of it all will come an honesty which men and women have never known . . . a devotion and loyalty . . . a tenderness and true understanding . . .

Out of it all will come—LOVE!

And always they will go on. And whatever it may cost . . . wherever it may lead . . . they will take the trail—TOGETHER!

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

After the romance is over, a girl can stand being hated; what inspires her to put Paris green in his coffee is that nonchalant "I-hope-we'll-always-be-friends" flourish, with which the average man tries to "sign off."

After a few years of scrapping, a marriage gets to be like a motor-car; one or the other of you is always listening for the "knock."

The man whose promises are as glowing as a radio announcer's, before marriage, is usually the kind who does his broadcasting somewhere else, after marriage.

A woman expects her enemies to gossip about her; but, it is not until her best friends join the whispering chorus that she feels sure that she is a success.

Free love is the kind that leaves a man free to marry some other woman who demands a wedding-ring. THAT, my children, is what he usually does.

Escaping from a romance, which has begun to grow tiresome, is an end which a bachelor thinks justifies any meanness.

Eden's Rapid Rise

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

No career in the annals of European politics and diplomacy can quite match the amazing leap to world fame of Robert Anthony Eden, Great Britain's new foreign minister. A few months ago his status in the British scheme of things was little more than that of liason officer between No. 10 Downing street and the Hall of the League of Nations in Geneva, Switzerland.

Edwin C. Hill

It was generally understood that he had a future —that he had been tagged by destiny for higher things. But it was assumed that this interesting young man—he is only 38 now—would drift along in the tranquil, leisurely British fashion and arrive some day at a full cabinet post—perhaps in his late 40's or early 50's. But Fate is a whimsical old girl and does queer things with people's lives.

SYMBOL OF SINCERITY

Little Pierre Laval, Premier of France, surcharged with the devious diplomacy breeding from his Latin blood, and playing his double game with Mussolini and the League of Nations, bemused the scholarly and elderly Sir Samuel Hoare, then at the head of the British Foreign Office, into a cynical arrangement by which half of Ethiopia was to be surrendered to Italy for the sake of preserving peace and keeping England's and France's possessions intact.

The storm of public resentment which followed this amazing arrangement projected young Eden into titanic stature. All at once he became to the British public the symbol of sincerity and good faith. Stanley Baldwin and the British cabinet, doing something that a government has not done in many years, making a complete apology to the nation for the Laval-Hoare deal, were forced to evict the luckless Sir Samuel and to put young Eden in his place.

And there he stands today, faced by graver problems than have confronted any British foreign secretary since Sir Edward Grey was forced to take the momentous step of declaring war against Germany.

Captain Eden has many distinctions of intellect and personality. He is one of the best dressed men in the world. He is famous for his wit and his quickness of mind. His personality is so attractive that wherever he has gone he has established the most amiable relations with the heads of other governments, except in one instance. Mussolini instinctively disliked him, and he instinctively disliked Mussolini.

That single fact, so human in its implications, may yet play a startling part in world history in the next few years. Of aristocratic antecedents, with an Eton and Oxford training, the young Foreign Minister is a perfect sample of the old-time public servant trained from childhood for possible leadership. Like the Cecils, the Salisburys and the Balfours, the Edens are one of those families whose mission it seems is to produce statesmen for their country.

BALTIMORE DESCENDANT

He is the son of William Eden, 7th Baronet of West Auckland, and the descendant of Lord Baltimore, who founded Maryland. He went into the war at the age of 18, to become the youngest adjutant in the British army. At 21 he was the brigade major. Two of three brothers were killed in action. The third brother, the oldest, is the present baronet.

Of the Eden family we read in "Burke's Peerage" that the Edens, male and female, are all counts and countesses of the Holy Roman Empire. Oddly enough, his family were dyed-in-the-wool Tories, a strange stock to produce such a flaming liberalist as the young Foreign Minister. His passion in life is the League of Nations.

Until the tremendous burden of Britain's foreign affairs fell upon his shoulders, he devoted every hour of his waking existence to the welfare of the League. Mr. Samuel Parton has written of him that he is "a marked man in the chancelleries of the Continent, covering the diplomatic 'swing-trick' which occupies our own Norman Davis."

He is not only adroit, tactful and interesting, but there have been many instances when he seemed gifted with a sort of clairvoyance in penetrating the deep obscurities that have befogged European post-war politics.

LIKE MATINEE IDOL

Captain Eden is tall, slender and handsome. His hair is dark and trim, and so is his close-clipped military moustache. He has a ready smile, likes to shake hands, talks quietly in a modulated voice, looks like a matinee idol and is happily married. He has the right to title, but prefers to be addressed as "Mister."

He hates violence of any kind. The story is told of him that on one occasion during a deer hunt in Sweden he had an easy shot at a big buck. But he lowered the gun with these words: "He's too beautiful to shoot," and let the deer bound onward into the forest.

Perhaps the nicest thing that was ever said about Captain Eden was said by Harold Lasky in the Daily Herald of London. "He is kindly and well-meaning in every aspect of life. He always does the clement thing if he possibly can, and no one can do the less decent thing with so much grace and charm."

That, indeed, would be a remarkably fine epitaph for any man!

Congress' First Duty

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Under the American system of government, the condition of "the Common Defense" is a responsibility which rests chiefly upon the Congress.

Voters should remember this salient fact when they come later in the year to the nomination and election of candidates for the Senate and House of Representatives.

Under the leadership of President Roosevelt the Congress resumed in 1933 an interest in the building up of "the Common Defense" which had waned in the ten years preceding.

First, the Congress began to build up the Navy to "equality with the strongest" in every class of combatant ship.

AUTHORITY GRANTED

Under preceding administrations since the Great War ended the Navy had been allowed to sink below the British navy in strength. It had become a poor second among the navies of the world.

Authority has now been granted to build up the Navy to the adequate status fixed by Congress.

Appropriations must be made at each session if this authority is to be exercised.

At the last session of Congress, again under the leadership of President Roosevelt, strongly supported by his far-sighted Secretary of War and the able Chief of Staff of the Army, General Douglas MacArthur, the restoration of the Army was started by the adoption of a modest program.

Again the Congress, in resuming this badly needed work of rehabilitation of our military establishment, was only carrying out the established military policy of the United States.

This statesmanlike enactment, passed by Congress just after the Great War ended, embodied the major military lessons of that conflict for the United States.

"ADEQUATE DEFENSE"

But again appropriations must be made at the present and subsequent sessions for a number of years to come if Congress is to overcome the damage to "the Common Defense" inflicted by the years of neglect suffered under previous Republican administrations.

Under the definition of Congress, "an adequate Army" means an army of not less than 165,000 soldiers of the regular army and not less than 14,000 regular officers.

At the present session Congress will fail in its duty to "the Common Defense" if it does not appropriate for the recruiting of the Army to the strength voted at the last session.

Among the armies of the world the United States Army, even when recruited up to the strength authorized, even when the 2000 additional officers are provided, will still rank 17th in strength. That is to say, there will still be 16 nations in the world maintaining larger regular armies than Congress has authorized for the United States.

AN OBLIGATION

In the light of these facts the Senator or Representative in Congress who opposes as unnecessary the building up of our little army to the strength fixed by Congress as the minimum necessary for the army's share of "the Common Defense" is guilty of trying to deceive the American people concerning their national security.

Providing for "the Common Defense" is not only the obligation of Congress under the Constitution, but Congress has no more important duty to perform under the American system of government.
